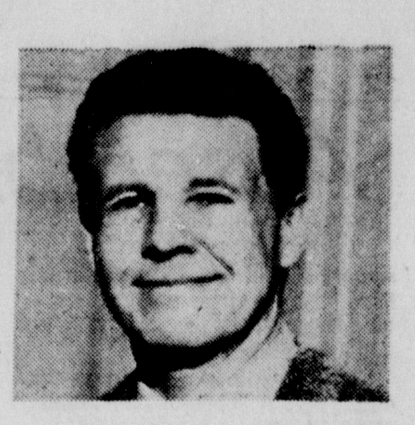
Ozzie Nelson succumbs to cancer at 69



LOS ANGELES (AP) — Ozzie Nelson, the bandleader-turned-actor whose "Adventures of Ozzie and Harriet" entertained millions for 22 years on radio and television, died of cancer early today. He was 69.

His wife for almost 40 years, Harriet Hilliard Nelson, was at his bedside when death came.

Nelson had undergone liver surgery eight months ago and remarked, "Isn't that odd for a guy who never drank or smoked."

Nelson, who formerly swam two miles daily in the Pacific Ocean, had failed after the operation and was confined to his Hollywood home. He was visited almost daily by his two sons, David and Rick, who starred with their parents on radio and television.

A funeral service is scheduled Thursday at Forest Lawn Hollywood Hills, a family spokesman said.

Oswald Nelson was born March 20, 1906, in Jersey City, N.J. The family was musical, and Ozzie started in amateur musicals with his parents at the age of 5. An Eagle Scout and football player, he played banjo and sang in a high school band. He starred on the gridiron for Rutgers University, won honors as a student and went on to New Jersey Law School.

Graduating at the depths of the Depression, he found the music world more enticing. He formed an orchestra and soon was playing hotels, ballrooms and college proms all over the country.

Ozzie played saxophone and sang in a manner reminiscent of the popular Rudy Vallee.

He later admitted that he cashed in on his resemblance to Vallee—"I got myself a megaphone, learned all of Rudy's songs, and didn't object in the least when someone would call up and ask if I were 'the guy who sang like Rudy Vallee.' "

Air pockets keep men alive

5 rescued from sunken rig

GALLIANO, La. (AP) — For 26 hours, Joe Bellard perched desperately on a valve handle to keep his head inside a bubble of life-saving air. He was trapped 50 feet underwater in an upside-down offshore oil rig.

One minute he was asleep in his bunk in the air-conditioned crew's quarters atop the mammoth $5 million oil well workover rig, Progress Marine No. 2, which was being towed slowly across a placid sea.

Then, suddenly, the men were scrambling in water and pitch-dark confusion, their air pocket fouled with spilled diesel oil and made hideous with the sound of the rig's stress and strain.

"I was just about gone when I saw a light," said Bellard. "Then the diver came through. I thought, 'Hallelujah!' "

Five men were rescued from the overturned hulk and a company spokesman said seven divers walked "every inch" of the sunken hulk early today looking for one man still missing.

The Coast Guard also put up a helicopter at first light today to scan the sea around the sunken oil rig, having determined the missing man was not aboard it.

The rig flipped in a slow, almost majestic, turnover Sunday afternoon in 60 feet of water 18 miles off the Louisiana coast.

Six of the 12 men aboard the rig jumped clear and were quickly picked up by the tugboat which had been towing the rig.

Bellard, 43, of Opelousas, La., and Derrel John Dore, 27, of Delcambre, La., were the first two rescued Monday. After stints in a divers' decompresssion chamber, they were brought to a hospital here for observation.

The other three, rescued later in the day and placed aboard a Coast Guard boat, were sent to the same hospital today.

Don Ludvich of Lafayette, La., training director for Progress Marine Inc., said divers also would try to complete a damage estimate today to determine whether the huge jackup drilling rig can be salvaged.

The rig's bottom shows above the waves. Her four jackup legs, each 120 feet long, were driven deep into the soft seabottom mud and the helicopter landing pad, normally at the top of the three-story superstructure at the stern, was instead just a few feet above the seaweed.

Bellard said when the crew quarters plunged beneath the surface, "the water was just pouring in and we figured we were gone. But when it got above the ventilator shaft, the water stopped.

"I was standing on a little valve and it was very uncomfortable," he said. "Those diesel fumes were making us real sleepy, but I moved often to keep awake because I was afraid. We didn't know the divers were there until they came up all of a sudden with a light."

Bellard said that the entire day was like a nightmare.

"It didn't seem real that I could be down there," he said. "And after they got me out, it didn't seem real that they had got me out."

Of the four men within the compartment, Bellard said he was taken out first because, "I was the weariest."

Dore was in a separate compartment. He had been rescued earlier after spending 22 hours in a five-by-five-foot room, standing on a pipe and later moving to a ledge where he could recline with his head above the water.

Dore said he had no idea what was going on, but was jolted awake at one point by a weird bubbling, roaring noise that turned out to be a rush of fresh air, pumped into the sunken hull from the surface.

Then he heard the scrambling sound of skindivers working their way through the corridors, and pounded on a pipe to draw their attention.

"I gave up hope three or four times and then, all of a sudden, there was a hand reaching for me," he said. "I seized it, and it jerked away.

"I don't know who was more frightened — him or me."

Deputies resume search for missing D.B. hiker

Sheriff's deputies resumed their search today for a 23-year-old Diamond Bar man missing in the Mt. Baldy area since Saturday, fearful that he may be injured.

However, officers reported that the hiker, Charles Richard Taylor, had once before turned up missing from a hike in the Colorado area. Taylor, reportedly an experienced trail hiker, returned to his home safe three months later.

Taylor, according to West End Sheriff's Department search coordinator Thomas Wickham, was reported missing at Mt. Baldy by his parents Saturday afternoon. The Taylors told deputies that their son, earlier in the day told them he was going hiking in the Mt. Baldy area and would return that evening. Taylor, according to his parents, had a pair of hiking boots and possibly a knapsack with him.

Deputies were called when Taylor failed to return home Saturday night. Deputies on patrol discovered Taylor's car parked in the Ice House Canyon Lodge parking lot about 10:30 p.m. Saturday.

When Taylor had not returned to his car by Sunday morning an initial search began with deputies combing the Ice House Canyon area to the peak of Mt. Baldy.

Wickham said the search for the man has resumed today with the San Bernardino County sheriff's helicopter expected to aid the ground parties in a search of the Timber Mountain and Cedar Canyon areas.

Wickham said searchers on Sunday and Monday searched the areas where numerous hikers had been injured or run into problems before without success. Wickham said deputies fear that Taylor may have gone off the regular trails into the rugged, rocky canyons and fallen or otherwise injured himself.

According to Wickham, Taylor in the past had disappeared for nearly three months on a hike. He turned up safe and in good health in Colorado.

Wickham said Taylor before his disappearance in Colorado told no one where he was going. Taylor was known to hike alone most of the time.

There were other reports that Taylor had once hiked from Canada to Colorado without incident.

Wickham said to an experienced hiker like Taylor, Mt. Baldy would not be a likely place to become lost.

Wickham said if no trace of Taylor is found today other experienced search and rescue teams may be called in to assist.

Taylor is described as being a Caucasian, 5 feet 8, 135 pounds of a thin build. He has short brown hair and brown eyes. He was last seen wearing a brown and orange long sleeve shirt, and dark brown Levis.

Anyone having seen Taylor in the Mountains on Sunday is urged to contact the West End Sheriff's substation at 988-1211.

HE KEPT HIS HEAD...AND LIFE

Nuclear blasts in Nevada

MERCURY, Nev. (AP) — Two underground nuclear tests, each with a minimum destructive force equal to the bomb that devastated Hiroshima at the end of World War II, rocked the Nevada desert today.

The weapons-related tests, which were fired 20 minutes apart, each had a yield of between 20,000 and 200,000 tons of TNT, the Energy Research and Development Administration said. The A-bomb dropped on the Japanese city had a yield of 20,000 tons of TNT.

Las Vegas police said they had no immediate reports of shock waves being felt in the resort city 90 miles south of the Nevada Test Site.

The tests were not related and there was "no significance at all" that they were conducted on the same day, said ERDA spokesman Dave Jackson.

"They were separate tests. They just happened both to be scheduled on the same day," he said.

A Las Vegas radio station reported a microphone suspended on a cord swayed gently when the shots were fired.

The first test was fired at 7:20 a.m. (PDT) in the remote Pahute Mesa area of the huge test site. Codenamed "Stilton," the shot was fired at the bottom of a 2,400-foot vertical shaft. There was no radiation leak, Jackson said.

The second shot, "Mizzen," was fired at Yucca Flat, 15 miles from Pahute Mesa, at the bottom of a 2,100-foot shaft. No radiation leak was reported in that shot.

The shots had been scheduled for 6 a.m. (PDT) but were delayed briefly due to adverse weather conditions at the test site.

Jackson said the Lawrence Livermore Laboratories of California conducted the Stilton test. The Mizzen shot was under the supervision of the Los Alamos Scientific Laboratory of New Mexico.

The tests were the seventh and eighth announced this year and the 271st and 272nd announced since the United States signed a treaty banning atmospheric testing in 1962. Some tests are not announced, however.

Ford again stresses U.S. support in Italian stop

ROME (AP) — Stressing the "extraordinary ties of friendship" between Italy and the United States, President Ford opened talks with Italian officials today after an hour of pomp and ceremony in the presidential palace.

Ford, winding up his weeklong European tour, met with President Giovanni Leone and gave him the message he has carried to other European leaders — that Washington is sticking by its Atlantic alliance partners.

"It is my pleasure to bring to you the greetings and high regard of the people of the United States for Italy," Ford told Leone. "In a world of rapid and dramatic change,

"I know that our meetings will reinforce the traditional bonds of affection and cooperation between our two nations, thus contributing to our goals of peace and prosperity for Italy, for the United States and for all nations."

Leone, in reply, said Italy and the United States are united "by human links of common, Western civilization and an alliance of almost 29 years."

Italian authorities carried out exceptional security measures for Ford's 10-hour visit which includes an audience with Pope Paul VI at the Vatican. More than 5,000 heavily armed police officers and soldiers were posted in the city plus another 200 sharpshooters on rooftops in the capital.

Despite some fears of demonstrations by Italian leftists, there was total calm in the city.

Elderly Pomona woman given savage beating by intruder

An elderly Pomona woman was beaten savagely in her bed early this morning by a burglar who climbed into her small home through an unlocked kitchen window, police reported.

The victim, Lily Simons, 83, 615 E. 12th St., was admitted to Pomona Valley Community Hospital's intensive care unit and was reported in serious condition. She had multiple facial fractures and the left side of her face appeared to have been crushed, according to officers.

It was the second attack by a burglar on a householder in Pomona within four days. Early Saturday morning Cal Poly teacher Dan Leon Miller, 33, was shot to death by an intruder in another part of the city at 1508 W. Orange Grove Ave. Police were uncertain this morning if the two cases were related.

Pomona Officer Michael S. Bouse said that an apparent bullet hole was found in the mattress of the elderly woman's bed and detectives were examining it late this morning to see if a shot had been fired during the attack on her. Bouse said she did not recall hearing a shot, but she said she was screaming during the two minutes she estimated she was being beaten.

The victim managed to call police herself after the attack and when Bouse and his partner, Roger L. Mathews, arrived she answered the door. Bouse said her face was covered with blood, as was the front of her nightgown. He helped her back into bed while an ambulance was called.

The woman, who was alert and lucid despite the beating she absorbed, said she heard a noise shortly after 3:30 and got out of bed to look around her house. She did not switch on a light and found nothing. But when she returned to her bed and sat down, she saw a figure standing by the chest of drawers. As she attempted to scream, the man sprang at her.

Police said they do not believe the attacker used just his fists on the victim, but probably struck her with a blunt object. After the beating the man was believed to have fled out the kitchen door. It appeared as if nothing had been taken, they said.

After an examination at the hospital, the attending physician confirmed that the left side of the victim's face was crushed, her nose was broken and her left arm badly damaged. Her head and face were covered with cuts. Despite all that, she remained alert.

Assembly Demos, GOP clash on budget outlays

SACRAMENTO (AP) — Assembly Democrats and Republicans have begun a bitter tug-of-war over the lower house's proposed $11.6 billion state budget.

Democratic leaders put off a vote on the 1975-76 spending plan Monday after Republicans announced they would vote as a bloc against the budget unless it were stripped of $128 million in expenditures.

The GOP action created a deadlock and brought charges of "gimmickry" from Democrats.

Meanwhile, the Senate approved its budget version without debate, sending it to the Assembly on a 33-1 vote.

Assembly Republican leader Bob Beverly, R-Manhattan Beach, charged that the budget actually contained only a $10 million surplus, instead of the $240 million projected by the Democrat-dominated Assembly Ways and Means Committee.

He said the proposed budget would "bring California seriously close to a deficit, leave unforeseen expenditures and virtually mandate a tax increase for 1976-77.

"There are no votes in the Republican caucus for it as it now stands," he added.

But Assembly Speaker Leo McCarthy, D-San Francisco, denied that the budget surplus would dip below $240 million and accused the GOP of "seriously misstating" effects of the proposed budget.

Jack Johnson, a McCarthy spokesman, said Democrats would meet today to decide which GOP demands were negotiatable.

There are 54 Democrats in the Assembly, exactly the number needed to approve the proposed budget. But Johnson said Democrats needed help from at least a few of the lower house's 25 Republicans to get the budget approved.

One Democrat is in the hospital, recovering from heart surgery. And Johnson said some other Democratic votes are doubtful.

"We must break the Republican caucus position in order to get a budget out," he said. "I think that once this is done there will be several Republicans that will vote for it."

The state constitution requires the legislature to approve a budget by June 15.

Included among Republican demands is a $61 million slash in renter tax credits. That would be done by limiting the credits to Californians with income of less than $8,000 a year.

The GOP also called for:

—Elimination of the state's $25 million support for school driver education programs.

—Slicing increased support for bilingual education from $8.7 million to $1 million.

—A freeze on state hiring, which would save an estimated $10 million.

Beverly claimed that "hidden costs" would cut away the budget surplus. He said the costs included: $33.5 million for additional Medi-Cal expenditures, an $88 million drop in state revenues, and $77 million to replace money removed from a higher education building fund.

Republicans also asked that $32 million be added to the budget for occupational education at community colleges.

The GOP complained that Democrats had put funding for new programs in the budget — even though those programs had not yet been approved by the legislature.

Beverly said those programs include a $1.2 million postcard voter registration plan and $10.9 million in operating expenses for a new housing finance agency.

Brown to submit job plan to Ford

One idea: hire one American for every Viet employed

SACRAMENTO (AP) — Gov. Edmund Brown Jr. says he will have some proposals to make to the federal government to provide more jobs for unemployed Americans.

Speaking to the AFL-CIO Legislative Conference on Monday, the first term Democratic governor said:

"In the coming months, as we finish the budget cycle, I'm going to be addressing my energy and my attentions to presenting to the federal government those ways by which I think they can put this country back to work."

However, Brown did not spell out his ideas for such proposals.

Brown said he would propose nationwide unemployment solutions even though "it's not the prerogative or even the potential of one state to take care of a massive economic program that is going to be required to put people to work."

The 700 delegates of organized labor from across California applauded loudly when Brown reiterated his administration's proposal that the federal government not ignore unemployed Americans as jobs are found for Vietnamese refugees.

"We will soon be presenting a program to the Ford Administration demanding that, for every job that is made available for a Vietnamese refugee, at least one is made available for an American citizen on the same basis," he said.

"Now there are people talking about the refugees, and I guarantee that I have feelings about any human being, and so does Secretary Mario Obledo. He's as humanistic as anybody."

Obledo, Brown's Health and Welfare Agency secretary, has stressed that the welfare of Californians should come ahead of Vietnamese refugees.

"But we have to make sure that while we express our charities ... we make sure we provide economic opportunities not just to some Americans, but for every American to go to work," Brown said.

Brown also restated his vow to avoid a general tax increase this year in California, and added that it will be "possible" to avoid an increase in 1976.

Brown indicated that he would not upset his budget plan by approving all proposed school financing measures.

He said he planned to meet Monday with Sen. Albert Rodda to discuss the Sacramento Democrat's bill to pump about $150 million into education.

"I have some ideas on the formulas," he said, without elaboration.

"We find a very difficult conflict between everybody saying they don't want taxes to go up and everybody saying they want the government to spend money. And you can't always do both."

He said his $11.3 billion budget proposal was really $200 million "short of what we expected to have."

Besides the Rodda bill, he said, there are $50 million to $60 million in other school proposals, and about $118 million in adult education.

The governor concluded, "...as I look around the state, I'm hearing the signal loud and clear that at least this year people aren't ready for another tax increase," he said.

Stockton teachers end strike

By The Associated Press

A strike by teachers in South San Francisco pushed into its seventh day with no end in sight, but their colleagues in Stockton voted to end their two-day walkout and return to classes today.

The 1,450 Stockton teachers decided at a meeting Monday night to call off their strike, despite failure to agree on a settlement with the school board.

District trustees had declared an impasse in talks over teacher demands for a 5 per cent raise. The board had offered no pay hikes, but agreed to retain 137 probationary teachers slated for dismissal.

Since the strike started Friday, the district's 48 schools, which normally serve 29,000 pupils, had remained open with nonstriking teachers, substitutes and administrators in classrooms.

Meanwhile, no talks were scheduled until Wednesday in the South San Francisco strike.

State Sen. George Moscone accused the South San Francisco Unified School District Board of Trustees with "just plain playing games" in the 12-day-old strike.

The district negotiator terminated talks Monday after six hours and scheduled no further negotiations until Wednesday.

The district said it had increased its wage offer from 1.9 per cent to 4 per cent, but the local Classroom Teachers Association says it still wants 7 per cent.

Since the walkout began May 23, all 21 elementary and secondary schools have remained open with the aid of substitute teachers. The striking teachers claim more than 90 per cent of 648 teachers stayed away from work.

Chaffey may raise minimum units

By PHYLLIS CANNON
PB Staff Writer

If sufficient teaching staff exists, the Chaffey Union High School District next year will begin requiring 25 units each of English and social studies for graduation from its schools.

This verbal consensus followed a 1-hour discussion at Monday night's school board meeting which resulted in the reversal of an administrative recommendation.

Administrators, noting graduation requirements in English and social studies had been cut from 30 to 20 units in the "contingency" plan adopted in February to balance the 1975-76 budget, recommended the 20-unit level be maintained.

U. E. Bauers, chairman of the Chaffey District Curriculum Steering Committee, said he felt the required units in each subject area could and should be increased to 25.

"Because of mid-term graduates, we're always overstaffed the second semester," Bauers told the board. "If the board and the administration wants to get 25-25, we can get it. It may mean putting a few more students in a class at the beginning."

Those on the board agreed. "We're not against teaching English and social studies," said board president G. A. Chalfant. "Our concern is that we add no financial expense. If we have the teachers in those areas, and can get through the year without having to hire any new ones, I'm not opposed to the 25-25."

Schools Supt. Allan G. Smith was instructed to return with language from the "contingency" plan to be corrected at the adjourned board meeting 7 p.m. June 9.

At that same meeting, final plans for the renovation of Tower Hall into an administrative building will be presented.

In another action, the school board was informed by business manager J. Milo Thomas that the 15th and final payment for the purchase of the old Chaffey Union Junior College District, now the Chaffey High School campus, is being paid this year.

The high school district has made 14 annual payments of $92,000 for the property, and this month will make the 15th payment of $104,284.50.

The board agreed to require from the college district a policy of title insurance and authorized the business manager, the school board president and the board clerk to sign documents finalizing the transaction.

Roger Dunlap, Chaffey High School's building construction teacher, invited board members to an open house at 639 W. F St., Ontario, Friday afternoon. This is the address of the three-bedroom home his construction class has built and which now is being offered for sale.

Dunlap said that later on the house will be opened for public inspection.

He told the board he plans to ask approval for a second house next year.

The board approved a proposal presented by Chaffey High librarian Viola Kallwiet that district high schools participate in a federally-funded, three-county Inter-Library Service which, through computers, would allow the high schools to request and receive information from public, college, professional and other school libraries in the area.

Montclair orders food handler tests

All food handlers, including perhaps even Little League snack bar volunteers, will need to undergo a training program and certification in the near future in Montclair.

An ordinance adopted Monday by the city council mandates certification of food workers after completion of a sanitation training program. The ordinance is identical to one recently adopted by San Bernardino County.

The program, Food Indsutry Retail Service Training (FIRST), will, according to Richard Roberts, representative of the San Bernardino County Health Department, affect workers in all food handling positions including restaurants, bars, roadside fruit stand, retail grocery stores and even Little League snack bars.

Roberts told the council that the FIRST training program is the first such program in the nation. Under the ordinance each food handler will be given a training manual to study when hired. At the end of two weeks he will be required to go to a training center for a short training session followed by an exam. After completion of the exam the food worker will be certified in food service practices and principles. The certification is for two years.

The intent of the ordinance Roberts said, is to encourage food hygiene practices and to make sure that all food handlers are trained in these practices.

The training program is bilingual. Besides the English and Spanish program a program is also available in Chinese.

Parade, fireworks, watermelon feed

La Verne to celebrate Independence Day

La Verne will demonstrate its friendliness once more next month with a community wide Independence Day Celebration, featuring free fire works.

The plans, which also call for a pancake breakfast, a parade, a watermelon feed, free swimming for the day, and a queen contest, were approved Monday night by the City Council.

The council has agreed once more to absorb the cost of the fire displays. It also will write off the cost of operating the municipal swimming pool for the day at Las Flores Park.

"This is a patriotic event," Mayor Mike Morales declared. "We don't believe it should cost anyone to show that he believes in America."

The parade also will be free as will the contest to pick Miss La Verne.

The council granted permission Tuesday to block off the downtown area surrounded by D Street, Bonita Avenue, 2nd and 3rd streets, and Magnolia Avenue while the parade goes by from 10 a.m. to noon.

The festivities will start with a pancake breakfast at the downtown minipark under the sponsorship of the Chamber of Commerce and the merchants' committee.

The parade, sponsored by the chamber's bicentennial committee, will be followed by a watermelon feed downtown. A contest to select Miss La Verne will be held at the Daily Theater of La Verne College. The winner will be presented during the fireworks display which starts at sundown at the Bonita High School stadium.

Walter Morrison, president of the chamber, said deadline for the queen contest is June 13. Candidates must be between 16 and 23 and must never have been married. Entry blanks are available at the chamber office.

Entires are also needed for the "Olde Fashioned Parade" which will have a motif of yore to tie in with the nation's forthcoming 200 birthday, according to R. G. Harris, chairman of the bicentennial committee. He said prizes will be awarded to the most original garbs and the best decorations.

In other matters Tuesday, the council:

Approved a contract with Los Angeles County for personnel services for the next fiscal year.

Held the second of its work sessions to balance the 1975-76 proposed budget which calls for a $3 million expenditure and a $212,000 deficit, not including expected pay raises.

Granted a one-year extension to the Hughes Development Corp. which wants to build a track of homes in La Verne Heights.

Approved first reading of an ordinance that would revise sections of the city code that deal with drainage districts. The new ordinance would establish local drainage areas as needed.

Dropout family to graduate together

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Robert Van Allen quit school after the sixth grade. The girl he was to marry later quit after the 10th grade. Their only daughter quit two months before graduation in 1973.

So it's 30 years later for Van Allen, now 42, that he is finally getting a high school diploma.

In the graduating line will also be his wife Kathryn, 40, and their daughter Lee, 19.

The trio makes up a 15th of the June 13 graduating class at Memorial Adult Center where Van Allen, a department store janitor, is student body president. His wife is secretary of the student body, and Lee is the senior class representative.

Van was a new Navy veteran when he decided to take up English and mathematics in January 1974.

"I was really excited," he recalls in an interview. "I guess that's all I talked about at home . . . my classes, the teachers and the excitement of learning new things." His wife caught the fever from him.

After hearing a lecture at Van Allen's request, she went straight to the registrar's office. Until that Mrs. Van Allen admits she "never had the nerve to go on a campus."

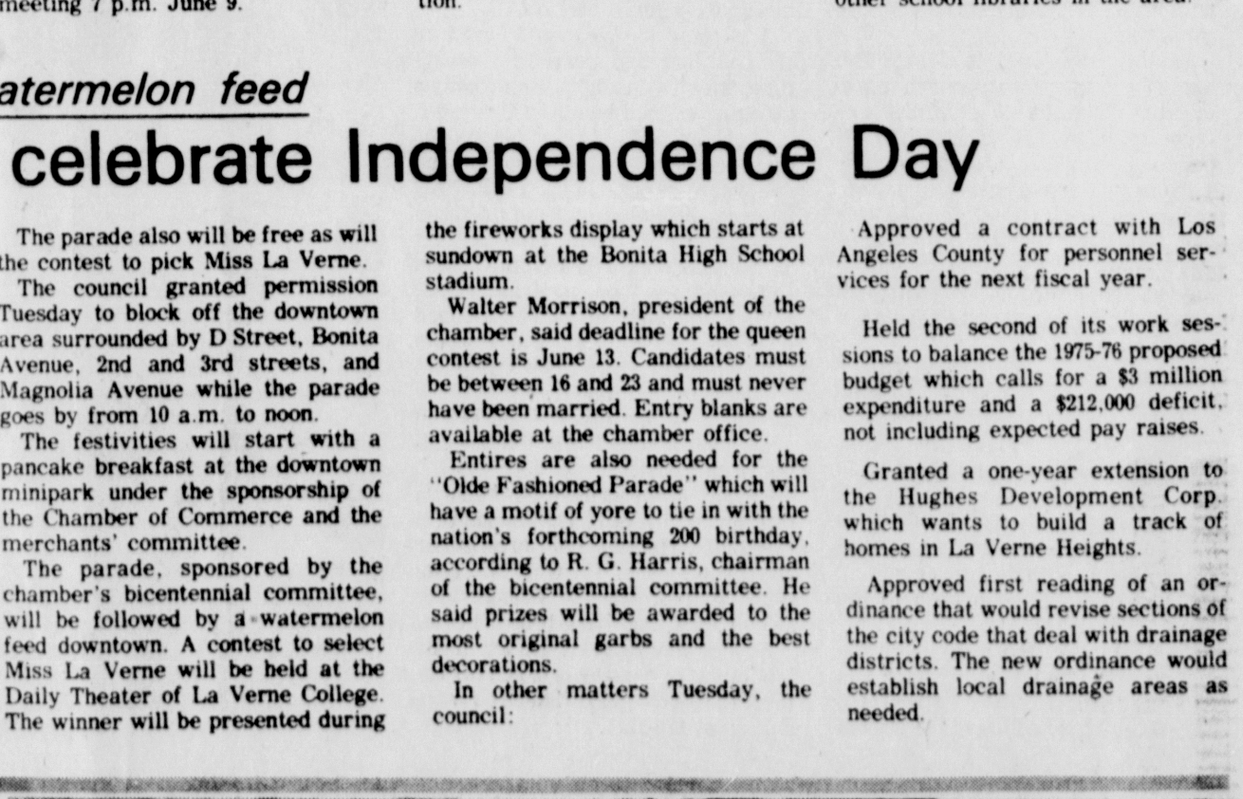
Lee Van Allen quit school in boredom, moved to Chicago but there "found out fast that without a diploma there just aren't any decent jobs."

"He told me so when I was quitting school," she says of her father. "I thought I knew more than he did."

The Van Allens' 14-year-old son is still doggedly at his studies and father says "there's no way he'll quit school — he's learned from our mistakes. "Each of us knows how important an education is," Kathryn added.

The family also studies together. And Mrs. Van Allen has two classes with Lee and one with her husband.

And when the senior prom rolls around June 13, it's still togetherness. The Van Allens — daughter, her boyfriend and her parents — are double dating.



A FAMILY AFFAIR

Robert Van Allen, 42, his wife, Kathryn, 40, and daughter, Lee, 19, brush up on their studies during a lunch break. They will graduate together at a San Diego adult school.

Things look different this week

Stronger Ford emerges

By WILLIAM L. RYAN
AP Special Correspondent

After his summits in Europe, the world may well be viewing President Ford as a bigger man, perhaps even a "new Ford" who has placed a strong personal stamp on American policy and in so doing enhanced chances for peace in the Middle East and the world.

Things look different this week, and much of the credit is likely to accrue to the President's performances with the Atlantic allies in Brussels and with Egypt's President Anwar Sadat in Salzburg.

Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger remains much on the scene, and the President professes to rely heavily on his chief cabinet officer. Yet Europeans, eying the results of the whirlwind tour, will see the President himself as the major figure who implicitly but strongly reminded Congress that foreign policy is constitutionally the President's business. And Kissinger would hardly object to that.

The Ford summits in any case promise far-reaching consqeuences.

There's been a sudden change in the look of the Middle East from one of deep gloom to that of a lively spark of hope. Equally sudden, there's been a change for the better in the North Atlantic Treaty Organization.

In the Middle East talks, Ford appeared to make a strong impression on Sadat. The two emerged speaking optimistically.

Maybe — just maybe — these new developments mean peace has a chance:

Israel has decided to reduce troops and arms in the Suez Canal area. Egypt publicly called that a step toward peace. Sadat is said to be considering letting cargo bound for Israel pass through the canal, which reopens this week. Syria is reported pulling back armor from the explosive Golan Heights front.

To the West, ever fearful of a new war-born oil crisis, this was a shot in the arm. Western Europe had another shot in the arm from Brussels.

Whatever it was President Ford took with him to NATO, that summit wound up with an alliance appearing reinvigorated and even confident, despite the American debacle in Indochina. NATO family quarrels suddenly looked less erosive. Even Greece and Turkey made a start in a search for a way around differences that only last week had looked insurmountable.

Moscow may begin now to show some signs of unhappiness and even of dismay.

For one thing, Moscow had wanted to assert at least equal importance with the United States in the Middle East quest. Now the President has once more demonstrated American predominance there.

Also, the Soviet detente policy clearly had as one of its goals the weakening of NATO. It had enjoyed some success and probably hoped for more if and when a 35-nation European Security summit comes off this year.

That and the Soviet-American summit remain on the books. But after Brussels, Moscow seems on notice that detente is a two-way street and until peace is real and palpable, the United States will continue supporting a NATO posture of alertness.

Florida scandals multiply

Closed door huddle halts Gurney bribe trial today

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) — Former Sen. Edward Gurney's bribery-conspiracy trial was delayed today as attorneys for both sides and the defendants met privately in the judges chambers.

U.S. District Judge Ben Krentzman gave no indication what he wanted to discuss in the closed door session, which lasted through the morning.

The government was expected to call another witness in the bribery conspiracy trial of the ex-senator and four others later in the day.

Prosecutors finished reading Monday a 350-page transcript of Gurney's May 1974 testimony before a Jacksonville grand jury.

"I'm an honest man. I've done no wrongdoing," Gurney told the grand jury which later indicted him.

"As God is my witness, I never received one red cent of these monies."

Gurney, ex-aides James Groot and Joseph Bastien, plus former federal housing officers K. Wayne Swiger and Ralph Koontz, are charged with conspiracy to build an illegal slush fund through influence peddling.

Gurney also is charged with lying to the grand jury, bribery and receiving unlawful compensation.

During his grand jury appearance, Gurney blamed an overprotective staff for his legal troubles.

"I don't pay attention to detail; I depend on staff to do that," Gurney said. As much as 95 per cent of the office business was handled by his staff, he said.

His secretary, Lois Elliott, whom he said he regarded highly, "protected me and over-protected me, and that's one of the reasons we're sitting here today. We've had a lot of people over-protected in Washington in the last few years. The government is about to fall because of it."

Gurney also claimed that Groot didn't keep him properly informed.

For 18 months, Gurney said he didn't know about the fund raising operations of Larry Williams, and when he found out in June 1972 he immediately ordered it stopped. But it wasn't until more than a year later, he said, that he learned of possible wrongdoing.

"The only way I would know about it is if I was a crook with the rest of them," Gurney said. "They would move heaven and earth to keep it away from me, which they did.

"Before this Williams thing, I was known as Mr. Clean in the state of Florida."

Other top aides sentenced, impeached or leave office

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. (AP) — Former Education Commissioner Floyd Christian has been ordered to prison for income tax evasion and Insurance Commissioner-Treasurer Thomas O'Malley has been impeached.

Also on Monday, Alan C. Sundberg, 41, was sworn in as a state Supreme Court justice to succeed Hal P. Dekle, who resigned under threat of impeachment.

Christian, 60, the first Florida Cabine officer sent to prison, was sentenced by U.S. District Judge Clarence W. Allgood and ordered to report to the medium security prison in Texarkana, Tex., on July 1.

Allgood said that after a 90-day study of Christian's activities, background and health, he would determine whether Christian should be released or serve more of the maximum five-year sentence. Christian also could be fined up to $5,000.

Christian pleaded guilty April 22 to not reporting $30,000 income from kickbacks on state education contracts and evading $15,751 in federal income taxes. He resigned in April 1974 when a House impeachment committee was named after his indictment in state court on 19 charges of bribery, conspiracy and perjury.

Found guilty of conspiracy, perjury and receiving $49,000 in kickbacks, he was fined $11,000, placed on probation for seven years and ordered to pay the state $32,000 for money lost when he awarded a mobile classroom contract to a friend's company.

The House of Representatives voted impeachment of O'Malley, 41, on charges of obtaining some $72,000 in financial favors. It was the first impeachment of a state cabinet officer since 1897.

O'Malley was accused of taking more than $70,000 from his former law partners in Miami in return for diverting insurance company business to them. He was also charged with soliciting and accepting $1,000 from Independent Life Insurance Co. before approving its request to build an office building.

The vote suspends him from office until completion of the Senate trial, expected in middle or late summer. O'Malley, who refused to resign, left his office without comment after the 104 to 15 vote. Gov. Reubin Askew declined comment on a successor.

Re-elected last fall while under indictment, O'Malley also faces trial in Leon County Circuit Court on charges of receiving $1,000 unlawful compensation and perjury by failing to report the gift.

Dekle quit in February during an investigation of his receiving a secret memorandum from a utilities lawyer in a multimillion-dollar utility tax case.

A fourth justice must be named to succeed Justice David McCain, who resigned effective Aug. 31 after a House committee recommended his impeachment on charges of helping friends in court cases.

In Harrisburg, Pa., the Pennsylvania Senate voted 47 to 0 to expel Frank Mazzei, a 62-year-old Pittsburgh Democrat found guilty last year of extorting political contributions from a state contractor.

Ask $7.4 million 1975-76 school budget at Walnut

A preliminary general fund budget figure of $7,410,578 presented to the Walnut school board Monday night is expected to be acted upon at the board's next meeting June 16.

Last year's adopted budget was $6,791,263.

Board members also looked at but reserved for future action a five-point salary proposal for the district's 100 classified employes. It included a request for a 9.5 per cent pay increase.

Budget restorations contemplated as a result of approval by voters last week of a revenue limit increase election amount to $358,962. They include:

—Restoration of high school department chairmen to the current level.

—General purpose funding of extra curricular programs.

—Contract year for teaching staff of 181 days instead of 177.

—Partial funding of the Mentally Gifted Minor program.

—A full work year for district clerical personnel except for some who may voluntarily choose a shortened work year.

—Expenditures for library and supplementary books.

—A full work year for administrators, school level and district level.

—Staffing services at Walnut High School.

Cuts still planned amount to $252,850.

They include reduction in consultant and other special contracted services, overtime in all classified categories, site and building improvements, travel and conferences, substitute teacher time, busing, non-instructional supplies, equipment replacement, capital equipment expenditure, nursing and caseworker services, instructional media and general fund support of an Early Childhood Education (ECE) resource teacher.

Elimination is expected of one administrative position and three previously scheduled Walnut High School teaching positions.

The board already has approved elimination of six full and part-time janitorial positions, a groundsman, a public relations assistant and a senior clerk typist.

In addition to the 9.5 per cent increase, classified employes are asking:

—A six-step schedule instead of the current five steps.

—A mid-year increase in the same percentage if the district grants such an increase to teachers.

A fully paid health insurance plan. There is such a plan now but the premiums are going up.

A study some time next year of all positions below the third quartile in salary. This would include comparison with other districts.

Suspect nabbed by police

A murder suspect was arrested and the victim's car recovered by a Pomona police officer making a routine traffic stop Monday night.

The suspect, Donald Cornelius Wimberly, 22, of Oakland, was stopped by Officer John T. Falls for failure to yield the right of way at Holt and San Antonio avenues. But the officer noted that the car's registration showed it was owned by Michael John Ralston of San Carlos.

Falls then checked the license number through the state-wide computer and got back the warning that the car had been stolen near Redwood City in a homicide and the driver might be armed. Falls placed Wimberly under arrest on suspicion of murder..

Detectives from Redwood City, and a deputy district attorney arrived in Pomona early today and began questioning Wimberly. Detective Homer Nagel said they planned to return him to Redwood City later today or Wednesday.

Nagel said Ralston, a 26-year-old out-of-work advertising salesman, had placed an ad for his sports car in a San Francisco newspaper and was last seen driving away with a potential buyer on a test drive May 28. His body was found the next day along a road, shot through the head, and his car, a 1974 Porsche, was missing.

Nagel said that Wimberly was not armed when arrested and the car had not been searched pending issuance of a search warrant. He said Wimberly matched the description of the man seen driving off with Ralston that day.

$4,000 Ontario theft

Ontario Police today were investigating an apartment burglary at 154 N. Palmetto Ave., that netted burglars more than $4,000 in men's and women's jewelry Monday night.

Austin MacKenzie called police Monday to report that he and his wife had returned home and found their apartment ransacked and most of their jewelry missing. Taken by the burglars were numerous men's and women's watches, cufflinks, earrings, rings, and necklaces.

Police said the burglars gained entrance to the MacKenzie apartment by using channel locks on the front door. Both of the bedrooms in the two-story apartment were ransacked and only the most valuable jewelry taken, police said.

Hunter convicted of slaying young Mormon missionary

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP) — A jury sought to decide today whether to impose the death sentence on a big game hunter convicted of murdering a young Mormon missionary during a visit to his trailer home here last year.

The same jury which convicted 42-year-old Robert Kleasen on Monday must decide whether to sentence him to life imprisonment or death in the slaying of Mark Fischer, 19.

The state called 18 witnesses today who testified that Kleasen's reputation was bad.

A psychiatrist, Dr. Richard Coons, testified: "My opinion is that there is a probability that the defendant will commit continuing acts of violence which will be a threat to society."

A Treasury agent, Earl Dunagan, was one of the few state witnesses cross-examined by the defense. He said Kleasen, "at one time" had been committed to a mental hospital in New York State.

The jury was to begin its deliberations on the sentence after completion of testimony.

If it finds Kleasen murdered deliberately and that he is likely to commit more violent acts, the judge must sentence him to the electric chair. If the jury answers "no" to either question, the judge must give him a life term.

World's thinkers thinking on it

How to solve globe's problems

WASHINGTON (AP) — A group of thinkers is spending four days debating the best ways to solve the world's future problems — including the possibility of doing nothing at all.

More than 2,000 businessmen, scientists, politicians and planners gathered here Monday for the second general assembly of the World Future Society.

William E. Hall of American University warned of "the impending collapse of institutional forms" and spoke of problems such as environmental decay, depletion of natural resources, urban congestion, threat of war, crime and terrorism and economic disaster.

He called for "a newer model of organization" to help institutions that can make change, such as federal and local governments, business corporations, schools and universities and international organizations.

But Jim Fowles of the University of Houston advised, "We should keep our hands off."

He said that those who complain about industrialization as the villain behind the world's problems ignore that "economic wealth does buy health and happiness.

"Futurists not only omit the great advantages of industrialization, they also exaggerate the disadvantages," he said.

"Mankind is also in little danger of going under because of pollution. The fouling of the environment is a matter much under human control ...," Fowles said.

He also was optimistic about the increasing deadliness of war machinery, saying, "The best armed are the most reluctant to fight because they have the most to lose."

He acknowledged the world has problems and more are in store. "Man will continue to harm his fellow man as he will continue to do damage to nature."

The best way to handle problems is through the present system, he said.

"Long-range, large-scale planning can make the human enterprise sleeker. But it will also make it more fragile," he concluded.

Japan's Sato, 74, dies

TOKYO (AP) — A private home funeral is scheduled Wednesday for former Prime Minister Eisaku Sato, the Nobel Peace Prize winner whose eight years at the head of the Japanese government saw the country become an economic giant.

Sato, 74, suffered a stroke at a restaurant two weeks ago and had been unconscious ever since. He died early today of heart failure, doctors said.

The government and the ruling Liberal-Democratic party will hold a "people's funeral service," described as the informal equivalent of a state funeral, at the 10,000-seat Budokan Hall at some future date. A public service will also be held Friday at a Buddhist temple.

Former President Nixon, whom Sato once described as his "best friend," said he was saddened by the news of his death.

"He guided Japan to its place among great nations of the world, and he made important contributions to world peace," Nixon said in a statement issued in San Clemente.

Irish statesman Sean Macbride, who shared the Nobel Prize with Sato in 1974, said he "made a tremendous contribution to the postwar period by insisting on outlawing the use of nuclear weapons."

The State Department said the United States "has lost a good friend, one whose devotion and dedication to the cause of world peace was truly distinguished."

Abortion workshop helps heal the sense of guilt

LA JOLLA (AP) — Sherri Finkbine Burrows, fighting a lingering guilt 13 years after her controversial Swedish abortion, is helping other women— and men—deal with the "leftover feelings" that can follow abortion.

In a workshop called "After Your Abortion" at the new Women's Center here, people whose lives have been touched by the turmoil of ending a pregnancy gather for counseling.

"Women are coming to the workshop who have lived with a sense of guilt for years, who still keep thinking of how old that child would be now, what it would look like," said Mrs. Burrows. "It helps them to find other women who have had the same guilts, traumas, reliefs."

"After 13 years, I, too, have leftover feelings to conquer, even though I'm able to say mine wasn't a baby—it was an abnormal fetus."

"I didn't realize (until a recent encounter group experience) how much the abortion had changed me," she said. "The abortion was long past, but the stress, the anxiety, the bitterness still raged within."

In 1962, when Mrs. Burrows and her former husband, Robert Finkbine, lived in Phoenix, Ariz., she made international headlines by flying to Sweden to have her fifth pregnancy legally ended. All 50 states then had antiabortion laws.

She took the drastic step after learning that a tranquilizer she had used while pregnant contained thalidomide, a drug with a one-in-three chance of causing birth deformities. Swedish doctors said after the abortion that the baby would have been deformed.

The aftermath of that abortion was a torrent of hate mail and condemnation mixed with gestures of support. She lost her job as a hostess on a TV show for children. In November 1973 she and Robert Finkbine were divorced.

She says a 17-day encounter experience at the Center for Studies of the Person here in 1973 helped her overcome feelings of having done something that caused widespread disapproval. She also married Dr. Earl Burrows, a psychiatrist associated with the Center. They have 12 children—six from her former marriage and six from his.

"I've come a long way since the program ended," she said. "Now, rather than seek approval for what I did or didn't do, I'd prefer having someone say to me, as one priest did (I'm not Catholic), 'I don't like what you had to do, Sherri, but I sure do like you.'"

Now she feels able to help other women.

Jack Haley very sick

SANTA MONICA (AP) — Actor Jack Haley, who played the Tin Man in the film classic "The Wizard of Oz," was reported in stable and slightly improved condition today, but still seriously ill.

Haley, 73, hospitalized here since a week ago for treatment of an undisclosed illness, underwent emergency surgery last Friday.

Dr. William C. Pomeroy Jr., who is treating the actor, said that Haley's condition has improved slightly.

Haley, who is semiretired, is the father of Jack Haley Jr., president of 20th Century Fox and the father-in-law of actress Liza Minelli.

Miss Minelli's mother, the late Judy Garland, starred with Haley in "The Wizard of Oz."

The Black Death (Bubonic plague) hit Venice, rapidly spreading to the rest of Europe in 1349. An estimated one-fourth of the European population was killed.

D.A.'s office won't file charge in a.m. car repossession shooting

District attorney's deputies refused to issue a complaint against a La Verne area man arrested early Wednesday for using a pistol to stop the repossession of his pickup truck.

Deputies in the D.A.'s Pomona office concluded that William Edward Dixon, 40, of 1138 E. Gladstone St., had no way of knowing that it was not a thief who pushed the pickup from his garage shortly after 1 a.m. They noted that Dixon armed himself, told his wife to call police and went outside where he fired several shots into the air to stop the repossessor, Ernest J. Brindley, 31, from hooking the pickup to a car and towing it away. There was no criminal intent on Dixon's part, authorities said in rejecting issuance of a complaint.

Brindley left the pickup and called sheriff's deputies who booked Dixon on suspicion of assault with a deadly weapon. He said he and his wife, Charlotte, were repossessing the pickup because Dixon was behind in the payments.

J. C. Penney gift to schools

Musical note for Bicentennial

The J. C. Penney Co. will present portfolios of sheet music to area high schools and colleges Wednesday in Ontario in observance of the nation's Bicentennial celebration.

W. J. Paprocki, manager of Penney's Montclair Plaza store, will distribute to music directors collections of historical and contemporary American music arranged for band, orchestra and choral groups.

The presentations will be made in the Ontario City Council chambers, 225 S. Euclid Ave., at 4 p.m.

These music sheet collections, called the Bicentennial Musical Celebration, are Penney's gift to the nation for the Bicentennial observance, said Paprocki.

"It is our hope that the Bicentennial Musical Celebration, with its 100 minutes of historical and contemporary music, will contribute importantly to our community's enjoyment of forthcoming Bicentennial festivities," he added. "This is J. C. Penney's way of saying 'thank you' to our neighbors for the nation's 200th anniversary."

Those receiving the collections Wednesday were previously notified and listed the music they wanted. High schools are Pomona, Claremont, Bonita, Chaffey, Ontario, Ontario Christian, Upland and Montclair.

Colleges include Cal Poly, Pomona, La Verne, Chaffey and Mt. San Antonio.

Nationwide, more than 30,000 high schools and colleges will be receiving these collections, said Paprocki.

Some of the musical selections were especially prepared by distinguished American composers. One selection dates back to 1770 and another is a newly discovered Sousa march. All the historic works have not normally been available to school musical groups.

Those high schools and colleges which failed to respond to Penney's previous offer for these selections may contact Mrs. Brenda Hemry at the Montclair store. The telephone number is 621-3811.

Peruvian artist to dedicate his mural

Yando Rios, lecturer in art at Pitzer College, Claremont, and a widely known muralist from Peru, will formally dedicate a mural to the college at a reception Wednesday at 8 p.m. in The Pit at the college's McConnell Center.

The program and reception are open to the public.

Rios has spent several months creating the mural which encompasses the fireplace area in The Pit, the college's coffee house-snack bar.

The mural places an emphasis on fire in its destructive and constructive forces and offers "something for everybody," according to Carl Hertel, professor of art at Pitzer College.

It was commissioned last fall by the Salathe Committee for Music and Cultural Arts, the Community Resources Council and the Dean's Academic and Cultural Events Fund.

Rios was born in the tropical Peruvian Amazonian city of Pucallpa and studied at the Fine Arts School in Lima, Peru. He has taught and painted murals in his native country and also was commissioned by the Smithsonian Institution to do a circular, rotating mural on Altered States of Consciousness for a show.

Eby is a member of the Certificated Employe Council of Associated Pomona Teachers.

He was graduated from La Verne College in 1963 and began his teaching career that year at Washington Elementary School in Pomona. He taught at Marshall Junior High School and Harrison Elementary School before going to Montvue.

CMC given NSF grant

The National Science Foundation has granted $6,100 to Claremont Men's College for use in the Joint Science Department of Claremont Men's, Pitzer and Scripps colleges.

It will be used to purchase two important pieces of instructional scientific equipment, according to Anthony Fucalaro, assistant professor of chemistry, who will administer the grant.

One piece of equipment will be used primarily in the study of pollution problems and another's main function will be in the area of organic chemistry.

Chino civic center fete slated

City and county officials will mark the official start of construction of the Chino Civic Center Wednesday at 3 p.m. when they conduct a groundbreaking ceremony

First to be built will be a two-story county structure to house two municipal courtrooms plus offices for various county agencies.

The city will later build a city hall and police station on the 11-acre site. The civic center will be located between Central and Chino Avenues and Sixth and D streets.

San Bernardino County supervisors recently awarded a contract to Berry Construction, Inc., of Upland for construction of the county building. The firm had a low bid of $1.4 million, which was about $1 million below the original cost estimate.

A big savings resulted from the county using performance plans and specifications rather than the usual preliminary plans and working drawings, said officials. About $852,000 in savings resulted from a new procedure initiated by county Supervisor Robert Townsend last fall which allows the contractor the feasibility to take advantage of periodic changes in the cost of different construction materials.

The county will finance its building and portion of the civic center with its share of federal revenue sharing funds. The city, however, plans to pay for its buildings through the sale of revenue bonds. All three buildings are set for completion by summer of 1976.

Townsend, of Chino, termed the groundbreaking as "the fruit of hundreds of hours of work by numerous individuals who seek to make this long-time dream a reality."

The civic center will make both city and county services more convenient to residents and also help both levels of government save money by sharing the property and central facilities.

Expected to join Townsend on the program are members of the Chino City Council and representatives for Rep. Jim Lloyd, D-35th Dist., and state Sen Ruben Ayala, D-32nd Dist

Dodgers fail to hold lead

MONTREAL (AP) — Woodie Fryman of the Montreal Expos figures no one — not even Manager Gene Mauch—can teach an old left-hander new tricks.

"I've had that shaky first inning all my career," said the 35-year-old tobacco farmer from Ewing, Ky., after surviving a two-run first inning and scattering 10 hits as the Expos downed the Los Angeles Dodgers 5-3 Monday night.

The baseball game was nationally televised in the United States.

"I've done everything—warm up longer, warm up shorter, sit down after warming up — nothing ever helps."

But Fryman said Mauch has the touch to improve his performance—and demonstrated it in the ninth inning when he trotted to the mound for a chat after Tom Paciorek drilled a two-out scoring single.

"Gene came to give a littl encouragement," said Fryman.

"He's a funny guy—he seems to know how to pep me up a little bit. He always has. He makes me a better pitcher."

With Mauch's advice in mind, Fryman got Jimmy Wynn to ground out to shortstop Tim Foli, who made several fine fielding plays, to end the game.

"I just went out to give him a chance to get things back together," said Mauch, who managed Fryman with the Philadelphia Phillies.

"It wouldn't surprise me if Woodie wins every game he pitches. I've never seen him do anything but win. He weighs 210 pounds—10 pounds of arm and 200 pounds of heart."

Fryman pitched his fifth complete game of the season and improved his record to 5-2.

The Dodgers got first-inning runs on Wynn's single and a wild pitch, but the Expos tied it in the bottom of the inning on a balk by loser Doug Rau, 5-5, and Larry Parrish's hit.

Larry Lintz delivered a run-scoring single in the third to give the Expos the lead, and Fryman doubled home the eventual winning run in the fourth. Foli followed that by batting in another on a suicide squeeze.

Lintz had entered the ball game in the first inning when he replaced starting second baseman Pete Mackanin. Mackanin left the game after drawing a walk and suffering an ankle injury while evading a run-down. The preliminary report was that the ankle was sprained.

"I really don't think it's that bad," said Mackanin, who will undergo X rays today. "I should have taken myself out of the game when it happened."

Mackanin called it quits when he had to hold up at second on a hit by Parrish. "If I had run past second I would have been thrown out."

Taylor not with Devils

Ed Taylor was in an uncomfortable position. So he got out.

The three-year Pomona High head basketball coach won't be back with the Red Devils next year.

"I had no intentions of returning to Pomona next year under the present conditions," Taylor pointed out. "I was teaching at a junior high (Fremont) and had to commute all the time. I had a tremendous amount of problems, and I attribute them to the situation. The only dealings I had with the school was when school was out at the end of the day."

Taylor, however, wanted to make it known that he did not resign the position. Conflicts with Pomona High Principal Joe Andrews forced him to leave.

"I feel very bad about this whole thing," he said. "I didn't resign. Andrews wouldn't extend my contract."

Avoiding the services of a part-time head coach was not the main reason for the dismissal, according to Taylor. The 25-year-old coach had various problems during the past year with his club. Several players had quit the team at different times during the season, making it tough for Pomona to become a contender for the San Antonio League title.

"The problems I have encountered over the course of three years I think was the big reason for the action taken," the only black head basketball coach in the district pointed out. "The talent we had was tremendous. The fact is I wasn't able to put it together and give Pomona the winning situation it could have had.

"If a coach was going to take on that position and wasn't able to be on campus, then I think the job should have relinquished a long time ago. I wanted to get a teaching position at the school. and I'm a little bitter about not being hired on. I haven't yet been able to get a straight and legitimate reason why I wasn't rehired to coach the team. Not having a teaching position at the school wasn't a legitimate reason enough for me."

Sounds like a bitter man, doesn't it? According to Taylor, he has no regrets and no hard feelings. "I don't feel I'm to blame totally, but I was involved in some problems at the school."

* * *

The former Pomona skipper wanted to make known that coaches in the district are not protected from this kind of thing happening again.

"I want the rest of the coaches in the district to know what the situation is here," he said. "The coaches have no way of being protected. The principals make the decisions. There are no guidelines for evaluation. If a principal says you're fired, there's nothing you can do about it."

Taylor, however, will not be a coach without a team. He's currently coaching the Los Angeles Tremors in the World Basketball Association.

"The WBA could turn into something really big and I'm glad to have the opportunity to be involved in it," he stated. "They're planning to compete internationally in July and I've been selected as one of the six coaches for the teams."

Networks eye sports critically

NEW YORK (AP) — Executives at both NBC and CBS will be making decisions within the next few weeks that could alter fall-winter sports programming at both networks.

In addition, CBS is expected to announce in a few days wholesale changes in its lineup of broadcasters for National Football League games this fall.

"All I can say is that we promise a completely different look for pro football," CBS vice president for sports, Bob Wussler, said this week.

"We field 15 broadcasters a week for pro football," said Wussler, "and this season there will be a 50 per cent change among those 15."

Also on Wussler's agenda is a decision on the future of ex-National Basketball Association star Oscar Roberston as the color analyst for CBS coverage of pro basketball.

"I haven't thought about it yet," said Wussler, "but I recognize that it is something that I have to think about. Oscar and I hope to have lunch together next week and discuss his future at CBS."

Leos win opener easily

Progress Bulletin Sports

ST. JOSEPH, MO. — Rain hit the waterlogged NAIA World Series for the third time Monday night. But fortunately for La Verne, it came too late to prevent the Leos from notching their first win.

Despite earlier fears that the Leopards "lost a lot of steam" because of having their game set back two days by rainouts, the Leos were simply too hot for North Carolina-Wilmington to handle.

With "Dangerous Dan" Quisenberry hurling a seven-hit shutout, the Leopards blanked the Seahawks, 8-0. But today the Leos will have to play two games and their pitching will be thoroughly tested.

La Verne (31-17-1) was scheduled to play Eastern Connecticut St. (35-10) at 1 p.m. Eastern Connecticut was a surprise 3-1 winner over Birmingham Southern (48-8) in Monday's 5:30 p.m. game.

It was after the 5:30 p.m. game that the rains came and washed out play for the third time causing the Birmingham Southern-North Carolina-Wilmington game to be postponed until noon today at another site.

If La Verne defeats Eastern Connecticut, the Leos will return to Phil Welch Stadium at 10 p.m. tonight to play the winner of this morning's (10 a.m.) Lewis University-Sam Houston St. contest.

Should the Leopards lose to Eastern Connecticut, they will have to come right back at 4 p.m. and play host school Missouri Western (32-24).

Monday's game proved to be a cakewalk for La Verne. Quisenberry, the one-man pitching staff, was in command all the way. Early hitting support by Nick Leyva, Paul Fleming and Ralph Valadez took the pressure off the Leo ace (17-6).

Leyva smashed a two-out home run over the left field fence in the first inning. The Leo shortstop pulled a hamstring muscle in the last game of the area playoffs againt Linfield and the extra rest helped him.

Fleming had his best day since the playoffs began. The slick-fielding first baseman belted a triple and two singles in four at-bats, stole three bases and scored two runs.

Fleming got things going in what was to be a four-run fourth inning with a one-out single and theft of second base. Seahawk pitcher Phil Lambert walked Leyva and then got a bad break when second baseman Gene Grogan booted Dan Graham's grounder.

That loaded the bases and brought up designated hitter Ralph Valadez. Valadez teed off on a Lambert offering and drove it down the rightfield line for a double scoring Fleming and Leyva.

Jim Prosser, the Seahawks' number two pitcher replaced Lambert. Lambert had gone into the game with a a fine 1.49 earned run average. But pitchers have all looked the same to La Verne ever since the playoffs began.

Prosser got off on the wrong foot by walking Mike Pagnotta to load the bases again. But he didn't stop there. He also walked Jim Lentine forcing in Graham and, after striking out Art Sanchez dished up another walk to Jim Sherman forcing Valadez in with the fourth run of the inning.

Things went quietly until the eighth when the Leos picked on Prosser again.

Lulled into a false sense of security after retiring Sherman and Rich Fielder, Prosser hit Fleming with a pitch. Fleming stole second and the Leopards were off again.

Leyva singled up the middle scoring Fleming. Graham, who had gone hitless in four previous at-bats including two popups, slammed a double to right centerfield scoring Leyva.

With Valadez at bat, the disgusted Prosser fired a ball that went through Ourt, the Seahawks' catcher and Graham scored all the way from second base.

Quisenberry, meanwhile, was in serious trouble only once.

North Carolina-Wilmington (27-10-1) loaded the bases with two out in the fourth inning on singles by Bo Pittman, Randy Ourt and Larry File.

But Quisenberry got Van Lewis, UNCW's leading hitter to ground into a force out ending the inning. The only other time the Seahawks got a runner as far as third base was back in the second inning.

Ourt was on third with two out, but Lewis grounded to Paul Fleming who made the putout unassisted to retire the side.

Quisenberry struck out five and walked only one. But with two games today, the question is WHO will do the pitching?

Tony Williams (2-0), the 6-3, 180-pound Santa Monica freshman is Ben Hines' likely choice although the La Verne coach has been very secretive about his pitching other than Quisenberry.

Rich Kelly (8-8) is in line to pitch one of the games. But Kelly hasn't been able to get anyone out for a long time and his earned run average has soared to 5.79.

Quisenberry has pitched nine-inning games on successive days and probably will be called upon to try it here. But is today the day?

Nolan Ryan: the guy next door

ANAHEIM (AP) — After Nolan Ryan pitched his fourth no hitter, tying Sandy Koufax' major league record and setting an American League record, he celebrated by going to a coffe shop with his wife, relatives and neighbors.

The next day Ryan got up early to drive his 3-year-old son Reid and a carload of other children to a picnic and pony ride.

When a reporter arrived at Ryan's unpretentious three-bedroom suburban home around noon, there were children's building blocks, toy cars and games strewn over the front porch. Through a front window, Ryan, 28, could be seen sitting shirtless, talking on the phone. His wife, Ruth, answered the door.

Throughout an interview, Mrs. Ryan kept looking through a front window to keep an eye on Reid while he played. Suddenly, the interview halted. Reid had stopped a passing ice cream truck and came running toward the house for money.

His dad gave him a dollar but encouraged him to be quick because he was keeping the ice cream truck man waiting. Then he asked Ruth to get him a fudge bar. As the 6-foot-2, 195-pound Ryan ate the fudge bar, the interview continued.

"We usually spend our off time around the house or doing things together," Ryan said. "I feel that I'm gone so much during the season that I try to spend as much time as possible with them...My family is my whole life. It's just the way I feel.

"I want to make the most of my career, but I don't want to sacrifice any more of my personal life than I have to. If it's financially worth it or if it's good for the club, I'll do extra things. But I try not to do any extra stuff just for the publicity. I try to make it worthwhile."

While a family man and unpretentious, Ryan also is unflappable.

"I try not to get excited in a game like the no-hitter," he said. "I don't think I can afford to. You make one bad pitch and it could be the last one. I try not to put added pressure on myself."

"He's always been like that," said Ruth. "I've known him since we were little. Even in high school, the more pressure there was, the better he did. Nothing really shakes him out there.

"He's got a a very even temper and takes things in stride off the field, too. He doesn't let little things bother him."

Ryan and Ruth grew up in Alvin, Tex., where he led his team to the state high school baseball playoffs. He graduated from Alvin High in 1965 and married Ruth in June two years later.

"I never gave a thought to throwing a no-hitter in the big leagues," he said. "I thought I might pitch in the big leagues some day, but never had a vision of being a successful big league pitcher.

"Now that I've achieved the no-hitters, I don't feel any different. It hasn't changed our life style anything at all.

Ryan started his major league career with the New York Mets. But after a 29-34 record over four season was traded to the Angels in 1971 with outfielder Lee Stanton. The Angels gave up infielder Jim Fregosi.

"I was disappointed naturally leaving the franchise I grew up with and the league where I knew the hitters, to come here where I knew absolutely no one and knew nothing about the club. And I guess everyone who's traded feels a little hurt because you feel the club has given up on you," said Ryan.

"But it was the biggest break of my career. It gave me the chance to pitch regularly and the club stuck with me when I was struggling."

In three seasons in Anaheim, Ryan is 71-51. His over-all major lague record is 100-85.

"When I came here I was a losing pitcher," he said. "In my first three years here I lost 16 games each year. I think the reason is the types of clubs we had. If you don't score runs you're going to lose a lot of games. But that's just part of the game and you have to accept it and try to keep your team in the game."

Ryan and his wife are happy to be in Anaheim.

"Ruth and I both feel fortunate to be here," he said. "We think that if we were in a media situation like that in New York, Chicago or even in Los Angeles with the Dodgers, the pressures would have been considerably more on us and more demanding on our time."

Cal State cagers to play in CCAA

The California Collegiate Athletic Association is back up to six members in basketball with the announcement of the addition of Cal State Los Angeles.

Cal State L.A., a member of the CCAA in all other sports except baseball, decided to join the basketball competition after being turned down in its efforts to join the major college West Coast Athletic Conference.

The Diablos, a former member of the Pacific Coast Athletic Association, played as a major college independent last basketball season. Coach Bob Miller's team compiled a 13-13 record.

Cal State's addition restores the automatic berth in the NCAA Division II playoffs for the CCAA. The conference lost that status two years ago when Cal State Fullerton left the league.

The Diablos will play for the league title next season. Cal Poly Pomona needs to cut a game from its schedule to fit in two games against CSLA.

Pomona's Jackson out

Ganesha's Jones makes state meet

There will still be six valley athletes competing in the CIF State Track Meet this weekend in San Diego, but there will be a slight change.

Pomona High hurdler Dwayne Jackson will not make the trip to Balboa Stadium, but Ganesha High hurdler Lloyd Jones will.

After reviewing the films of the Masters Meet, which was held last Friday night at Cerritos College, the CIF officials discovered some discrepancies in the original finishing order.

Jackson, who ran the 330 lows in 37.7 seconds, was originally placed fifth at the meet. Jones, who was clocked in 14.5 seconds in the 120 highs, was listed as the sixth-place finisher at the meet.

The top five finishers qualified for the State Meet.

When the films were reviewed, it was discovered Jackson had actually finished sixth behind San Bernardino's David Cooper instead of ahead of him. Both were clocked in 37.7 seconds.

Jones, a junior, was moved up from sixth to fifth — thus sending him to San Diego.

"I thought I had fifth place," the Ganesha hurdler commented. "I was pretty sure they were going to give it to me anyway."

Lloyd began his workouts for the meet Monday by working on his speed. "I'll be working on repeat 220s and working on my start. I think I've got my form down pretty well."

Jackson, obviously, was disappointed in the reversal.

"When I came across the line, I glanced to my side and saw Cooper," the Pomona star noted. "After the race, one of the guys came over, said I finished fifth, and took me to the victory stand. I thought that was it. Those are the breaks, I guess."

So, it appears Jackson's season is over. He's planning on attending Grambling or Mt. San Antonio College next year, leaning toward the junior college, however.

Hancock battles tradition

PROVO, Utah (AP) — William Hancock of Southern Illinois takes the season's best performance into the decathlon competition that opens today as a prelude to the 54th NCAA Track Championships.

But to win he'll have to withstand the challenge of a former national champion and the near-tradition at Brigham Young University of winning the NCAA decathlon.

BYU nas won the past two seasons. BYU's Raimo Pihl, who won with 7,782 points in 1973, has a season high this year of 7,943. That is second to the Hancock's 7,978.

Rounding out the top five are Craig Brigham, Oregon, 7,827 points; Al Hamblin, Maryland, 7,503, and Chryster Lythell, BYU, 7,447.

A BYU spokesman said Monday 25 athletes were officially entered in decathlon competition today and Wednesday. The top five scorers earn points that will be to their teams' credit when the NCAA meet proper is held Thursday through Saturday on the BYU track here.

Defending NCAA track champion Tennessee is represented in the decathlon by Russell Fritts, whose season high is 7,123.

Three other schools expected to be deep in the battle for the track championship when the meet proper is held—Texas-El Paso, Southern California and UCLA—are not represented in the decathlon, the BYU spokesman said.

Decathlon events Tuesday are the 100 meters, long jump, shotput, 400 meters and high jump. On Wednesday are the 110-meter hurdles, discus, pole vault, javelin and 1,500 meters.

Runald Backman of BYU, who won the NCAA decathlon title last year with 7,874 points, did not return from his native Sweden in time to be eligible this year, a BYU spokesman said.

Pihl, who the spokesman said was red-shirted and not compete last year, and Lythell are both Swedish. Lythell won the 1975 Western Athletic Conference competition, which was dominated by BYU athletes. Lythell finished sixth in the NCAA meet last year.

Can Pihl sustain his performance and win a second NCAA title?

"Raimo has an uncanny ability to knuckle down under adversity," BYU track coach Clarence Robison said in a recent interview.

"When he won the title in 1973 it hinged on the final event, the 1,500-meter run. It was not a strong event for Raimo but was for the man he had to beat," said Robison. "He won, though we almost had to carry him back to the dressing room."

Pihl is on record as saying: "I don't like to speculate, but I think I am at least as capable as I was in 1973.

"The decathlon is not something you improve on suddenly. It takes years of almost daily effort to prepare for it. You can't throw your total effort into one event.

"Mental toughness and durability are big factors. There are 10 events. As soon as one is over, you must get psyched up for the next one."

The BYU spokesman said decathlon events start each evening at 4:30 p.m., MDT, and are expected to last till 9 to 9:30.

New sports format for NBC, CBS

Although he was signed to a multiyear contract, the former Cincinnati Royals and Milwuakee Bucks guard was disappointing this season as CBS's basketball analyst.

Robertson was criticized for his inability to translate the strategic aspects of the game to the fans as well as his lack of improvement and insight as a color broadcaster.

But Wussler did turn sympathetic when discussing Robertson. "He had problems of style that both he and I are very much aware of," said Wussler. "In fact we have discussed them more than once.

"But Oscar worked very hard, made a sincere effort and showed up a lot at other things which sometimes is a problem with ex-athletes.

"We had no difficulties with Oscar," added the CBS vice president, "like we did with Baylor the season before."

Former Los Angeles Lakers star Elgin Baylor was color analyst for the 1973-74 season, but was fired and replaced with Golden State's Rick Barry when the 1974 playoffs started.

Ratings for the NBA rose this year over last and CBS has one season left on its reported $27 million, three-year pact with the NBA.

Speaking of basketball, NBC may be about set to make an announcement concerning television rights for the American Basketball Association next season.

After ratings slipped badly for the second straight year, NBC has dropped the National Hockey League and is expected to replace the NHL with ABA action.

But, neither NBC nor the ABA are speaking much about the new agreement. "We haven't heard a word in a few weeks," said an ABA spokesman.

Knight rips television

KANSAS CITY (AP) — Outspoken Indiana basketball Coach Bobby Knight ripped television, illegal recruiting and long hair Monday, but floored his audience with a pat on the head for a group he has long considered an irritant—sports writers.

Knight, whose Big Ten champion Hoosiers were shocked by Kentucky in the NCAA playoffs, in a 31-1 season, spoke to the second annual convention of The Associated Press Sports Editors. Afterward, he jostled with editors in a lively question-and-answer session.

Knight sarcastically criticized television's role in sports.

"You get the impression sports were created and produced by television...that things would be just fine without you writing or us coaching," he said. "I'm amazed how they were able to fill the Rose Bowl each year before television came along. We had to hold up the start of one game against Northwestern for 24 minutes because the TV people weren't ready."

Knight said "I may sometimes take an irreverent view towards sports, because it is really for the kids—not you, me, television, or even the fans. If we lose sight of this, we are in real trouble."

The fiery Knight said cheating in the recruitment of schoolboy basketball prospects had reached the outlandish stage.

"It's tough to document proof of cheating," he said, " but if a school is trying to get away with murder, I think they should get the death penalty if they are caught."

He added "I think the coach should be fired and the school lose its schedule for a year. We have either got to set up a stringent set of rules or set up a semi-pro league to subsidize the programs giving cars, clothes, and tickets the alumni will buy back for $1,000."

Knight went on to say he would be in favor of lie detector tests for offenders, providing "it was handled properly by league offices, with the results published. As I understand it, the polygraph isn't foolproof."

He said a good deal of recruiting abuses could be avoided if a kid was limited to four trips in April of his senior year in high school.

"Then the boy could have 10 days, from May 1-10, to make up his mind," Knight said. "I know kids who have made trips even after they have signed letters of intent."

Knight mentioned he recently brought up what he considered a case of illegal recruiting and nothing was done about it.

Speaking to some 100 sports editors, Knight said "In some instances, cheating is kept at a league level and doesn't get to the NCAA...it is sort of a case of take care of your own."

Knight said Indiana doesn't cheat because "I think kids want honesty and discipline."

Delving into his own personal philosophy, Knight revealed he doesn't want kids on his team who wear long hair and mustaches.

He explained that he just personally doesn't care for long hair and that he must have rules. Knight said it was a signal to him that a kid really wanted to play team ball if he was willing to abide by Knight's rules.

The coach came under stern questioning on this point, but said "If you don't have some rules, you are taking a step towards anarchy."

In closing, Knight told the sports editors "I have a reputation for needling writers. But I want to tell you this. I think you have done a helluva job in promoting college athletics...better than some of those guys on television."

Sports briefs

PHILADELPHIA (AP)— Tight end Ted Kwalick, who played out his option with the San Francisco 49ers of the National Football League, signed a three-year contract Monday with the Philadelphia Bell of the rival World Football League.

ATLANTA (AP) — The Atlanta Hawks of the National Basketball Association have been purchased by a group of Atlanta businessmen headed by Simon S. Selig Jr., it was announced at a news conference Monday.

The new owners, subject to approval by the NBA, announced they planned to keep the team in Atlanta and have every intention of signing two first-round draft choices in last week's draft, David Thompson and Marvin Webster.

BUFFALO (AP) — The Buffalo Braves announced Monday that Tom McMillen, their No. 1 pick in the National Basketball Association draft a year ago, had signed a multi-year contract.

The University of Maryland star passed up American professional basketball last season to accept a Rhodes scholarship at the University of Oxford in Egland.

BLOOMINGTON, Minn. (AP) — The Minnesota North Stars named their fourth head coach in less than two seasons Monday, continuing their struggle to regain National Hockey League respectability.

Former North Star team captain Ted Harris, 38, was named to replace interim coach Charlie Burns, who brought the Stars home fourth in the NHL Conn Smythe Division—but out of the playoffs for the second straight year.

ORLANDO, Fla. (AP) — Darryl "Dr. D" Dawkins, who is skipping college to join the Philadelphia 76ers basketball team, celebrated his new lifestyle Monday by buying a Lincoln Continental and a Cadillac.

Dawkins, 18, sighed a seven-year contract for more than $1 million with the National Basketball Association team Saturday.

CHICAGO (AP) — San Francisco Giants left fielder Gary Matthews was fighting, perhaps playfully, with teammate Derrel Thomas when he broke his left thumb, it was reported Monday.

The injury occurred in Montreal before Sunday's game with the Expos and, in apparent coverup, it was explained that Matthews was hurt in a pepper game.

NEW YORK (AP) — The New York Cosmos of the North American Soccer League said Monday that Pele will decide on Wednesday whether he will sign with the Cosmos.

Cosmos spokesman John O'Reilly said he received word from Pele's adviser, Professor Jose Mazzei, that "because of the complicated nature of the contract, which is in both Portugese and English, it is taking longer than expected to go over the contract."

Claremont, led by Chuck Rosin's 77, had had a total score of 320 to finish fourth behind San Marcos (311), Hart High (315) and San Clemente (317).

Rosin qualified for the state individual finals next Monday at La Cumbre Country Club in Santa Barbara. Gladstone's Art Fiola shot a four over par 76 and also qualified for next Monday's finals.

Walnut enjoys rout over Claremont, 15-1

The Walnut Thorobred team mauled Claremont Post 78 Monday night.

Walnut battered two Claremont pitchers for 16 hits and were helped by six Claremont errors in a 15-1 game. Tracy Cowger and Mark Canavan led the Walnut attack.

Cowger had four hits including a double and a bases loaded triple. He knocked in five runs and scored twice himself. Canavan had three hits, batted in two runs and scored four times.

Walnut scored twice in the first on Bob Flores' two-run homer. The visitors added three more in the second on two hits and a walk. One of the hits was Canavan's two-run double.

Canavan's single and a two-out double by Cowger made it 5-0 in the fourth. Four hits, two errors and a walk brought in four more runs in the sixth. Cowger's bases-loaded triple was the big blow in the four-run seventh.

Claremont scored its only run in the fourth. Rick Tullis pounded a one-out triple and scored on an infield out by Paul Sokolowski.

Sokolowski got a hit in the eighth inning to extend his hitting streak to all 12 games Claremont has played.

Jim Vallandingham (1-1) struck out eight and walked six in picking up the win.

Claremont (7-5) meets Pomona Post 30 Thursday night at 7 p.m. at Ralph Welch Park.

Walnut (1-2) plays the Charter Oak Thorobreds at Mt. San Antonio College this evening at 5:30 p.m.

Anderson drafted by Cavs

Eric Anderson, a graduate of Garey High in Pomona, has just completed a brilliant career at Macalester College in St. Paul, Minn.

Now he prepares himself for a career in the National Basketball Association.

Anderson, a 1970 graduate of Garey, was recently picked up in the 10th round of the NBA draft by the Cleveland Cavaliers.

Eric was named to the first team of the All-NAIA District 13 Team, and was a first teamer in the Minnesota Intercollegiate Athletic Conference. It was the second year he gained such an honor. He was also named his team's MVP for the past two seasons.

Eric's senior year statistics included 20.5 points per game, eight rebounds an outing, five assists a game and five steals a game.

He finished second on the Macalester College all-time career scoring list with a total of 1,253 points, first on Macalester's career steals category, third on the school's career assist chart, second on its rebounding chart for guards, and he was the first Macalester player ever to lead the conference in scoring.

Anderson was runnerup for the conference's MVP award due to his team's final season record of 8-7 in conference. He was also the District's second-leading scorer.

Eric also had a fantastic career in baseball at Macalester.

He completed his four-year career with a .340 batting average, starting every season. In his freshman year, he was selected to the first team All-Conference as a centerfielder. This year, he again won first team honors, as well as being the team's MVP for the second straight year. He committed only four errors in four years of conference play.

Garey's McDonald seeks spot on team

FULLERTON — Garey High forward Delbert McDonald, the Pomona Valley High School Basketball Player of the Year, has been listed on the tryout roster for the Southern California High School All-Star basketball game coming up July 9 at Cal St. Fullerton.

McDonald, who guided Garey to the CIF 3-A cage championship before having to sit out the final game due to an injury, is one of 30 players listed on the SoCal team which will battle the L.A. City All-Stars.

George Terzian of Pasadena High, has been selected by the Southern California Interscholastic Basketball Coaches Association to mentor the Southern Cal squad.

The personable Westmont College (Santa Barbara) graduate will try to make it two in a row for the Southern California team, which is made up of the top graduating seniors from the CIF Southern Section schools.

Last year, Crescenta Valley's Ed Goorjian guided the SoCal stars to a 121-100 victory over the City All-Stars.

Assisting Terzian with his squad will be Ron Palmer, whose Long Beach Poly team captured the tough Moore League title this past season.

Terzian has scheduled tryouts for the Southern Cal team this week at Cal St. Los Angeles. The 30 players listed will battle for positions on the team Thursday and Friday from 7-10 p.m. and Saturday from 1-4 p.m.

Included on Terzian's tryout roster are Player of the Year from all four CIF, SS divisions.

Included are All-Americans David Greenwood (4-Player of the Year) and Roy Hamilton of Verbum Dei and Brad Holland of Crescenta Valley — all who have recently signed to play at UCLA.

AYSO sets sign-up dates

This year' the AYSO will have teams for boys and girls in the 7-18 age bracket as of Dec. 31.

The greening of Saudi Arabia

HOFUF, Saudi Arabia (AP) — The government of Saudi Arabia is planning to spend $12 billion of its oil wealth in a effort to turn the eastern Saudi desert green.

This ancient oasis 180 miles east of Riyadh is the center of a grandiose desert reclamation program, part of a $143.5 billion five-year development plan.

The program here is but a fraction of Saudi Arabia's agricultureal plans. In all 4.18 million hectares are to be turned from sand to farmland.

"But this will require at least half a century to accomplish," said Taher Ebied, undersecretary of agriculture. "We have the money, we have water resources. What we don't have is an adequate infrastructure to carry out this ultimate objective."

At present, only 1.4 million acres of farmland are cultivated in the desert monarchy, which earns more than $25 billion in oil revenues annually.

At this oasis, the midnight horizon glows in fierce red hues at the edge of Dhahran, the world's largest oil field. As tongues of flared gas fret the skyline, camels file by the palm trees, heedless of the modernity developing around them.

The kingdom, Ebied said, envisions improving and regulating underground water resources and installing an efficient drainage network to reduce salinity in various areas.

Five research centers have been set up in Jidda, Riyadh, Hassa and Qatif, in addition to the one in Hofuf. These operate model farms and carry out experiments dealing with fishing, insecticides, fodder, seeds, fertilizers, poultry and livestock.

"We have 17 medium-size dams in he kingdom," said Ebied, "and we will increase these to 23, gradually."

Most of those dams control rain waters in the southern regions of Jaizan and Abha.

The biggest is Jaizan Dam: about 1,000 feet long and 125 feet high, with a capacity to store enough water, to irrigate about 50,000 acres. it cost $27 million.

The Hassa irrigation and drainage program cost $70 million and increased the cultivable area around Hofuf from 20,000 acres to 50,000 acres.

Hofuf was once a rest area for nomadic Bedouins. The government has earmarked $30 million for resettling those Bedouins at Hassa, Hofuf, Khober and elsewhere.

Restoration of neighborhoods new theme of HUD

WASHINGTON (AP) — Restoration of neighborhoods rather than destruction is emerging as the dominant theme in the federal government's new system for dealing with the problems of big cities and their suburbs.

John Zuccotti, chairman of New York City's planning commission, estimates that his city will spend 40 per cent of its federal urban assistance money in coming months on housing, with nearly two-thirds of that going for rehabilitation of existing units.

He said the emphasis is a direct reversal of the way New York used to spend its federal housing funds, even though remodeling has long been cheaper in many cases than tearing down old housing and building new.

Zuccotti said the shift was made possible by the flexibility in a new law under which the Department of Housing and Urban Development will be opening the money spigot full stop this month.

Norfolk, Va., is also shifting its emphasis from massive slum clearance projects to neighborhood preservation. But the new flexibility permitted by HUD isn't the only reason.

"Our worst slums are gone at this point," said Ronald Massie, head of the city's community development agency. "Our downtown is virtually rebuilt. Now we can divert our attention to improving our existing neighborhoods."

Ever since 1949, when federal aid for urban renewal started, most of the money spent on urban problems was offered for projects which knocked down neighborhoods wholesale and put up brand new office buildings or apartments.

Urban renewal, Model Cities and other programs helped change the face of American cities. But they also uprooted what were mostly poor families and pushed city dwellers into the suburbs.

The $2.45 billion HUD is setting aside for 1,200 or so communities under the Housing and Community Development Act of 1974 by establishing a specified line of credit with the federal government abandons the idea of allocating money through several, narrowly defined programs which fund specific projects.

Instead, the money is allocated to cities and other urban areas on the basis of population, poverty and overcrowded housing.

There are still some strings attached. The communities must get approval of their plans for spending the money, and the plans for providing adequate housing are crucial.

But a HUD survey of the metropolitan cities seeking aid showed 80 per cent noted a reduction in red tape and 85 per cent felt there was less federal intervention in the local decisions on what to do with the money. Donald Slater, director of the office of federal relations for the National League of Cities, said his association's experience supports the HUD conclusions.

The same HUD survey found that in meeting their housing needs, "cities will rely on rehabilitation to salvage deteriorated housing stock." The plans for expansion of the housing stock would add 59 per cent of the units through rehabilitation and the rest through new construction, the survey said.

But there are complaints from local governments particpating in the program, too. They center on an issue as old as urban redevelopment: The amount of money provided.

The distribution of the money on a formula basis means some cities will get more over the years, some less.

New York is down for $101 million this year with a gradual increases over the years raising that to $156 million by 1978. "The formula as it comes out is sound," said Zuccotti, but he complained that the increases would only be enough to keep pace with inflation.

Houston, which received Model Cities funds but never qualified for urban renewal money because it has no zoning restrictions, goes from $6 million this year to $22 million next year. Hortense Dixon, director of the city's community development program, said the new money will enable Houston to rehabilitate deteriorating housing and provide grants and low-interest loans for that use, survey the city's housing needs and expand a network of multiservice neighborhood centers offering day care facilities, local city hall offices and counseling services.

But Norfolk and San Francisco, two cities which were adept at initiating proposed programs which found favor with federal officials, go the other way. Norfolk's peak funding of $32 million in 1973 slips to $17.8 million next year and $5.9 million by 1980. San Francisco drops from $29 million this year to $13 million in 1980.

"I don't think the formula accurately reflects the needs in the central cities," said James Jaquet, director of community development for San Francisco. "We're feeling the crunch," said Norfolk's Massie.

Jaquet and Massie said they can see little prospect for funding new programs, even though they will be able to polish off projects already under way. The formula includes a so-called "hold-harmless" provision designed to guarantee that a municipality won't be deprived of money it needs for previous commitments. Slater at the League of Cities says the provision appears to be working.

But the law also provided that after distributing funds by the formula, HUD would have extra money in a "discretionary fund" to distribute for particularly worthy projects or to smaller communities in a metropolitan area.

That plan went awry when 75 urban counties accomplished the necessary regional agreements and qualified for HUD money. The agency and Congress had expected only 10 to qualify.

Congress is considering a supplemental appropriation of $55 million this year and the administration is seeking $200 million more for next year to alleviate the situation.

But as of now, HUD has notified the smaller communities there won't be any of the money the federal agency had advised earlier might be available.

Grocery 'trickery' tactics hit

SACRAMENTO (AP) — The state's director of consumer affairs says he plans to get tough with grocery chains which charge more in low income neighborhoods.

"For too long, a few retail grocers have stooped to tricking consumers into paying more for products than they should," the official, Taketsugu Takei, said Thursday.

"These kinds of unfair business practices will not be tolerated by state government."

Veteran benefits

Hospitals expand medical privileges

By RAY CROMLEY
(Third in a Series.)

WASHINGTON — (NEA) — Your medical privileges have been greatly improved by Public Law 93-82.

Assuming you are eligible, you now have the right to outpatient care from VA doctors if these services would make hospitalization unnecessary.

These outpatient services include medical examinations and treatment, and optometrist, dental and surgical services.

Veterans who are 80 per cent or more disabled from service-connected causes are entitled to outpatient care for any disability.

There is an increasing tendency at the Veterans Administration to interpret these rights liberally for older veterans. That is, any important ailment or disability of those 65 and older — and sometimes younger — tends to be dealt with by outpatient service where possible. There's a good reason. Keeping patients out of crowded hospitals eases the VA burden. It can also be helpful to a patient who might wait a considerable time for a hospital bed.

Pre- and post-hospitalization outpatient care is provided. So are mental health services, consultation, professional counseling and training of members of the immediate family of a disabled veteran.

The law also permits the VA to approve direct nursing home car for veterans with service-connected disabilities. The patient no longer need by hospitalized first, if the disability is such that hospitalization is unnecessary.

Where the VA in a particular area does not have the medical specialist or equipment to handle your particular disability, the government is now empowered to contract with local private doctors.

If you have a service-connected disability and are faced with a medical emegency, either for that disability or some other ailment associated with it, and if VA facilities are not available, the VA may now reimburse you, both for the reasonable value of private hospital care and for other medical services, including necessary travel expenses.

The law now provides specific authority for a VA program of screening, counseling and treatment of sickle cell anemia.

Peacetime veterans will now have the same medical-hospital entitlements as wartime veterans. The sole criteria for discrimination is whether the disability is or is not service connected.

Public Law 93-538 increases from $2,800 to $3,300 the basic grant for a specially adapted automobile for some seriously physically handicapped veterans whose injures are service connected.

Holding up V.P. procedure

Nixon's bust undedicated

WASHINGTON (AP) — Not since Alben W. Barkley has the bust of a vice president been placed in the Capitol, and it appears the delay in updating the collection will continue.

Five men have held and left office since Barkley, but a stalemate has developed over Barkley's successor, Richard M. Nixon, whose bust was completed by an Italian sculptor eight years ago.

The law provides for a bust of each vice president to be placed in the Senate wing. The vice president serves as president of the Senate.

Busts of the first 35 vice presidents are on display. Twenty of them are in the Senate chamber itself; after the wall niches there were all used up, places were found in the corridors around the chamber.

The last bust to be dedicated was one of Barkley's, who served under President Harry S. Truman in 1949-53.

Nixon was the next vice president in 1953-61, and after he left office, the Senate Rules Committee arranged for him to have a bust made. Nixon chose Gualberto Rocchi of Milan, Italy, as the sculptor.

When the bust arrived in 1967, members of the Rules Committee were taken aback. Some said they didn't recognize Nixon. The comments of Nixon's family were reported to be less favorable.

The bust was sent back to Italy to be reworked and, on its return, Rocchi's $5,000 fee was paid out of Senate funds.

But Nixon did not respond to Rules Committee suggestions that a dedication ceremony be arranged. After he became President in 1969, he sent word to the committee that he felt it would be more appropriate to have the ceremony after he left the White House.

But he left under anguishing circumstances and members of the Rules panel say they have preferred not to bring up the question of a ceremony for a while.

Meanwhile, the committee arranged for a bust of Lyndon B. Johnson, who followed Nixon as vice president. It was done by the American sculptor, Jimilu Mason. She was a friend of Johnson; he said he was highly pleased with the result. But Johnson declined to have the bust dedicated. He said his ceremony should follow Nixon's since Nixon served ahead of him as vice president.

Both of the busts are stored in a Capitol vault, awaiting an end to the stalemate.

Sen. Hubert H. Humphrey, vice president after Johnson, has not yet selected a sculptor for his bust. An aide said he saw no hurry since the busts of his two predecessors have not been put in place yet.

Members of the Comittee staff said that, so far as they knew, nothing had been done to arrange for a bust of Spiro Agnew, who resigned as vice president in 1973 after pleading no contest to a tax charge.

But they said no doubt Agnew's bust would be on display in time. He would not be the first controversial vice president to be so honored.

One of the busts in the Senate chamber is of Aaron Burr, vice president under President Thomas Jefferson. Burr was tried for treason but acquitted. He also killed Alexander Hamilton in a duel.

President Ford served as vice president for nine months after Agnew resigned. But the Rules Committee staff said that no steps had been taken yet to procure a Ford bust.

State gas tax hike proposed

BAKERSFIELD (AP) — The California Highway Commission has recommended a temporary 2-cent-a-gallon gasoline tax for highway safety projects.

Commission Chairman Joseph Sinnott of San Diego urged Thursday that the legislature make the tax effective July 1, 1976.

It would boost the state gasoline tax to 9 cents a gallon and would raise about $500 million over 2½ years, he said.

He said the highway improvements paid for with the money could prevent 2,200 deaths and 30,000 injuries over 20 years.

Send-a-kid-to-camp

Bobby and Raymond—they're eager about camp

Bobby is 11. He has lived in four different foster homes since the death of his father five years ago.

He was 6 when his father died and the third oldest out of a family of six children. When Bobby's father died his mother had a nervous breakdown and had to be hospitalized.

Bobby rarely sees his mother or his brothers and sisters. The younger children are in foster homes like himself while the two oldest now live with his mother.

The family Bobby lives with is good to him but Bobby is still insecure. It seems that every time he begins to feel a part of the family something goes wrong and he is placed in a new environment.

The family Bobby lives with now cannot afford to send him to camp. They have their own children to care for and the $60 it would cost to send Bobby to camp is to much for them to handle.

Bobby wants very much to go to camp. He has never been, and the experience would help him grow with children his own age outside of school.

Raymond is 9 and the fifth child in a family of 11. His father is a day laborer and the family lives in a three-bedroom house in Upland.

Raymond and his brothers and sisters are given free lunch at school because the family can't afford to pay for it.

Raymond's two older brothers have already been in trouble with the law. His mother tries to supervise and guide her children but with so many she is unable to do an adequate job.

A week at summer camp would help Raymond. He loves the outdoors and camp would teach him how to constructively utilize his spare time.

Your dollars can help Bobby and Raymond go to camp.

The Donrey Public Foundation, Inc., is conducting a drive to send Bobby and Raymond and other children like them to a week of summer camp in the San Bernardino Mountains.

To give, make a check payable to the Donrey Public Foundation Inc., P.O. Box 2708, Pomona, 91766.

Hospitals: a sigh of relief as boycott ends

While the patients probably don't share the same enthusiasm, valley hospital administrators are pleaded that the doctors' boycott is at least temporarily over and surgeries at all hospitals were back on schedule today.

Most of the valley hospitals announced serious financial losses due to the two-week slowdown by anesthesiologists in protest of staggering rises in malpractice insurance premiums.

The walkout by anesthesiologists began in San Francisco May 1 and spread to the southern part of the state. As a result of the protest, the state legislature was called back into special session by Gov. Edmund Brown Jr. and is now working on legislation to help ease the medical crisis.

Pomona Valley Community Hospital is one of the few hospitals that did not face serious financial losses, according to the administrator, Bob Burwell.

"We had a very brief period when our census dropped somewhat," Burwell said. "But this is not too unusual. It fluctuates on other occasions, like Christmas."

Burwell credited the stable patient census, in part, to the fact that the doctors did perform surgeries which had been previously scheduled.

Some surgeries are always scheduled a week or 10 days in advance, he said.

Park Avenue Hospital in Pomona, on the other hand, reported a marked revenue loss, said Clifford Powers, administrator.

"Our medical wing is completely closed, although the maternity and emergency sections are in full operation," said the administrator.

The hospital, which normally performs four or five surgeries daily, had one scheduled for Monday and a second due today.

"Financially, this means a loss of $7,000 to $8,000 per week," Powers said. "We have had to lay off several employes.

"I'm tickled that the strike is over and that things are looking up. We should be back to normal soon."

San Antonio Community Hospital, Upland, reported Monday that the surgery schedule was rapidly returning to normal.

"This means that we will not need to implement our contingency schedule of reducing the staff," a spokesman announced. During the past two weeks, the hospital has absorbed a $15,000 to $20,000 loss each day, according to John Towers, administrator.

While David Robinson, administrator at San Dimas Community Hospital, is not yet able to give the exact amount of the losses at the hospital, he said that the patient census is down 10 per cent.

But the surgical rooms were back in full operation at the 100-bed hospital on Monday, Robinson said.

All four surgical rooms at Inter-Community Hospital in Covina were back in operation Monday morning with 13 operations scheduled during the day.

Nearly 20 surgeries have been scheduled today and the hospital's normal of about 25 per day should be reached by the end of the week, according to Rosemary Cruitt, hospital spokesman.

"During the past two weeks, our revenue loss was $14,000, but we were able to recover $40,000 by cutting employes to three-or-four-day weeks, saving our payroll," added Mrs. Cruitt.

"Rather than lay off any employes, we chose to cut back the work week. It will take most of this week to get us back into the full swing."

Other hospitals in the valley reporting losses are Ontario Community Hospital, with an estimated $5,000 a day loss and occupancy off 37 per cent, and Foothill Presbyterian Hospital, Glendora, where the 50 per cent reduction in daily surgeries has resulted in a $5,000 daily loss.

At Queen of the Valley Hospital in West Covina, a spokesman said the walkout by anesthesiologists probably cost the hospital about $13,000 a day.

The hospitals all anticipate being back to full operation before the end of the week — a healthy situation for them.

Montclair man killed in collision

A 22-year-old Montclair man was one of four persons killed in a head-on collision Sunday in Salton City.

The California Highway Patrol said Robert H. Hankla of 10205 Bolton Ave., Montclair, was killed while riding in a motorhome.

Also dead are Ronald Singleton, 56, Anaheim; Jerry Murphy, 36, Anaheim; and John P. Colegio, 19, Oasis.

CHP said Murphy was driving south on State Route 86, north of Desert Shores, when his car apparently crossed the double line and crashed into the motor home driven by Singleton.

Colegio was a passenger in Murphy's car, CHP said.

Another man who was riding in the motor home, Chester Green, 50, of Indiana, was admitted to the Riverside County General Hospital with major head injuries. He remains in serious condition in the hospital's intensive care unit.

Mr. Hankla was born May 6, 1953 in Tilden, Neb. He was a member of the Trinity Lutheran Church in Montclair, and an Eagle Scout with Boy Scout Troop 313.

Surviving are his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Claire Hankla of Montclair; two sisters, Mrs. Dianne Salois of Casper, Wyo., and Brenda of Montclair; three brothers, David, Dale and Bruce of Montclair; grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Wilgocki of Elgin, Neb.; and great-grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Will Totten of Elgin.

Services will be held Friday at 3 p.m. at the Draper Mortuary Chapel in Ontario. Burial will be in Bellevue Cemetery in Ontario.

Pomona agrees to study police panel

By ED PRATHER
PB Staff Writer

An agreement to study the need for a police commission in Pomona and implement a variety of new procedures in the city's police department was approved Monday night by the Pomona City Council.

The agreement, drafted by city officials and representatives from the Minority Coalition for Equal Justice six weeks ago, was formally approved by the council by unanimous vote.

The key issue in the agreement is a feasibility study of the need for a police commission in Pomona, an issue which has been strongly debated in recent years by council members and minority residents.

Under the agreement, the feasibility study will be completed within 90 days by the same negotiating teams which worked out the current arrangements.

Monday's action by the council concluded a process which began last January during a stormy council session in which minority residents protested police-minority relations in the city.

Following that meeting, Angel Alderete from the Community Relations Service of the U.S. Department of Justice was called in to promote constructive dialogue between the residents and city officials.

During the intervening months, negotiating teams representing both sides were selected and worked out the agreement adopted by the council Monday.

In addition to the police commission feasibility study, the agreement also calls for the hiring of bilingual employes to staff the police department's complaint desk.

It also provides for an increased recruitment of minority officers and assigning officers to specific geographic areas for one year.

While most of the agreement deals directly with police matters, another item calls for City Administrator Jerrold Gonce to initiate a meeting between representatives of The Progress Bulletin and minority residents concerning news coverage of minority events.

The members of the negotiating teams signing the agreement were Gonce, Police Chief F. P. Wallich, City Attorney Patrick Sampson, Councilman Benjamin Ochoa, all representing the city, and Rafael Estupinian, John Owsley, Robert L. Smith, Rudy Gutierrez and Eddie Garcia, representing the Coalition for Equal Justice.

Ochoa commended the parties from both sides for the many hours of work that had gone into the negotiations, and stressed the need for continued cooperation.

In other business, the council approved the city's participation in the Pomona Avenue of Flags project. The council agreed to have the city install and remove 177 flags on six holidays each year and during this year's official Centennial ceremonies in August.

The council also approved a boxing exhibition scheduled for Saturday at Sharkie Park sponsored by the Pomona Athletic League. The event will feature some 16-20 amateur bouts, the winners of which will move on to the national championships next week in Louisiana.

The council rejected a curb and gutter, sidewalk and paving project for three properties on Hunt Avenue after the property owners protested the project. Each of the property owners would have been assessed more than $1,000 for the project and the council agreed that the cost was too high in view of the current economic conditions.

City participation in the Pomona School District's summer lunch program was approved, as was the filing of a grant application for a senior citizens' nutrition project.

Water contract, utility district approved by Upland councilmen

By VONNE ROBERTSON
PB Staff Writer

As the next phase in its $2.5 million water expansion program, the Upland City Council awarded the contract for construction of water transmission mains related works to Amick Construction Co. of Ontario on Monday.

Amick's bid of $287,184 was the lowest actual bid after both officials discovered that the lowest bid submitted, $240,000 by Ace Pipeline Construction Co. of Pomona, contained a major mathematical error. City Atty. Don Maroney concurred with the bidder that Ace Pipeline should be allowed to withdraw its bid.

While eight prospective bidders were solicited for the addition of air conditioning at the Magnolia Recreation Center in Upland, only one bid was submitted.

However, the bid of $13,830 by Bice Air Conditioning Co. of Ontario was less than the design engineer has predicted, according to City Manager Lee Travers.

The council voted to award the contract to the Bice Co. The money will come from the Park Development fund.

After a public hearing which drew only support from the audience and from letters submitted to the council, the councilmen voted to establish an underground utility district on Mountain Avenue from the freeway north of Ninth Street.

The utility companies, Southern California Edison Co., Theta Cable TV and the General Telephone Co., will bear all costs for the installation of underground facilities within the public right of way in the district.

The only costs to the city or affected property owners will be installation charges for connections at the Santa Fe Railway crossing gate control and service to a traffic signal system controller at Mountain Avenue and Ninth Street.

The city estimates that work will begin in November and be completed by the end of May 1976. Also included will be the removal of all overhead electrical, cable television and telphone utility facilities.

Placed on first reading was an ordinance requiring a business license for outdoor advertising signs in the city of Upland. The license does not affect signs on the premises of businesses or real estate directional signs.

The proposed license fee is 25 cents per square foot for the current calendar year, 50 cents per square foot for 1976 and 75 cents per square foot during 1977 and thereafter with a maximum of $200 per sign per year.

With Charles Miller of Cucamonga as the spokesman, a group of residents appeared at the meeting to protest off-road traffic on dirt roads between N. Grove Avenue and 15th and 16th Streets.

According to Miller, motorbikes and four-wheel vehicles break down the barriers and fences which are constantly being constructed by the San Antonio Water Co. and the San Bernardino Flood Control District, controllers of the area.

Travers assured the group that the Upland Police Department would increase its patrol in the area and that the city would attempt to maintain some stronger barrier systems to keep trespassers out of the area.

One Upland police officer won his appeal for educational benefits while a second officer lost out in decisions made by the City Personnel Board of Review and approved by the council on Monday.

In approval of the finding of the board, Councilman George Gibson said the council members did not personally review the hearing findings but were accepting the board's decision because of the time that group had spent studying the issue.

Officer Walter Ciszak was awarded educational incentive pay which had been denied this spring while Officer Arthur Lindars was denied the benefits.

La Puerta status in doubt

Sycamore School to close

The Claremont Unified School District board Monday night before a large crowd at Danbury School voted to close Sycamore School as an elementary school at the end of the 1975-76 school year, and discontinue La Puerta as an intermediate school at the end of the 1976-77 school year.

The board took no action on a recommendation by District Sup't Richard Kirkendall that the three special education classes at Mountain View Elementary School be distributed throughout the district and the adult school center be located at Mountain View next fall.

The audience quietly accepted the 4-1 decision to close Sycamore, except a man who shouted an eight-letter obscenity at the board. His exclamation was booed by the audience.

The board's decision to close Sycamore was not clear-cut, and came only after board members wrestled with the matter for nearly half an hour.

Kirkendall had recommended that the decision to close an elementary school be made not later than Jan. 1, 1976, that special education classes be taken from Mountain View, and that La Puerta be discontinued as an intermediate school at the end of the 1976-77 school year.

Board member Aruth Steffen moved to accept the recommendations, but withdrew his motion when board president Ernest Taylor noted the differing opinions of board members.

Steffen then moved to accept Kirkendall's motion on closing an elementary school, "and not related to any school, but you can see the implication."

The motion failed, with William Anderson, Beverly Shacklett and Taylor voting no, and Steffen and Mary Ellen Kilsby voting yes.

Anderson moved to close Sycamore as an elementary school at the end of the coming summer school session, but failed to get a second.

"We need time to look at the issues," Steffen said, as he moved to maintain Sycamore for another school year.

But Mrs. Shacklett asked him to amend his motion to close the facility for the 1976-77 school year. Steffen would not, and withdrew his motion.

Mrs. Shacklett moved to close Sycamore at the end of the 1975-76 school year. Anderson seconded the motion, and said, "It is fair to indicate our intent," and called the school closing "an economical and education expedient."

Taylor said the coming year would give the district time to work with the city in formulating a joint use of the facility.

Mrs. Kilsby said that Kirkendall's recommendation gives the board "greater flexibility to looking at what ought to happen rather than tying us to a closure."

"Nothing is irrevocable," Steffen said, as he voted for closing Sycamore. Mrs. Kilsby voted no.

The closing of La Puerta was a unanimous vote.

As to the Kirkendall motion about using Mountain View as an adult school center, Anderson said he didn't feel the board must address itself to any action.

"I feel we should use available classrooms in the elementary schools for adult education," he said.

Taylor noted that the locations of adult education classes doesn't require an action by the board.

Earlier Kirkendall had explained that the adult school principal would be the site administrator at Mountain View if the adult education classes were centered there.

His comment drew many statements by parents in support of Mountain View principal Dennis Mann.

Opinion

The innocence of Mayaguez

Critical comments one still reads about President Ford's actions in the Mayaguez incident betray a fundamental misunderstanding of international law on the part of many Americans.

Some writers, for example, have charged that the Mayaguez "violated" the 12-mile limit claimed by Cambodia by sailing within eight miles of the island of Koh Tang, where the seizure occurred. The United States, it is noted, routinely intercepts foreign vessels ignoring its 12-mile fishing limit, including those of the Soviet Union.

Indeed, at the very time the Mayaguez drama was unfolding, this country seized a Polish trawler off the coast of California and brought it into port and only released it when its operators agreed to pay a fine of $350,000.

It is further pointed out that even though the United States does not recognize the 200-mile limit claimed by several South American countries, over the past decade we have quietly paid millions of dollars in fines for the release of impounded American tuna boats.

What right did we have then to get on our muscle simply because little Cambodia stopped an American cargo ship inside its territorial waters?

The answer is, by virtue of a right that has been a basic part of international law for centures — the right of innocent passage.

In the absence of a state of war — and even in wartime there are certain rules — no nation may molest or prevent the free and peaceful passage of the vessels of another nation, either on the high seas or within its claimed coastal jurisdiction.

Such molestation or hindrance has, in fact, historically been considered a causus belli. Egypt's closure of the Stratis of Tiran to Israeli shipping in 1967, in violation of the right of innocent passage, was one of the immediate causes of the Six-Day War.

If the Cambodians suspected that the mission of the Mayaguez was other than innocent, as was the case with the Pueblo, the burden of proof was on them.

A simple inspection of the ship and check of its manifest might have been one thing. But the removal of the crew and the attempted towing of the Mayaguez into a Cambodian port was a clear violation of recognized international law.

Infringements by one nation on the claimed fishing or off shore mineral exploration rights of another nation are an entirely different matter and are treated separately under international law.

The Mayaguez obviously was not engaged in fishing or coastal drilling or any other encroachment on Cambodian sovereignty. Neither was it engaged in espionage. It was passing through Cambodian waters on a peaceful trading voyage.

Even granting all this, it has been argued that in view of the belligerency and suspiciousness of the new regime in Cambodia, the United States should have advised all American shipping to steer well clear of that country's coast.

But then we might have done the same thing with the Barbary Coast pirates back in the early 19th century, or we could have paid them tribute as the great powers of Europe were doing and have avoided a lot of trouble. Instead, President Jefferson sent a punitive expedition against Tripoli in defense not only of American rights but those of all other nations.

Without such a doctrine as the right of innocent passage, oceanic commerce and travel between nations would be impossible. The world would be in a constant state of undeclared war of all against all.

The Cambodians have stopped the ships of other countries besides the United States. The sooner they realize where their national sovereignty ends and their international obligations begin, the sooner they will be accepted as members of the world community.

A Saxbegram

There is an engaging candor about newly appointed Ambassador to India William Saxbe that Indira Ghandi and company should appreciate but probably won't.

"It could be we were closer 27 years ago than we are now," Saxbe said of relations between India and the United States. Saxbe also said something to the effect that "a grudging respect" is about the most the two countries could expect to achieve and that the U.S. interest in India is abasically limited to humanitarian and cultural affairs.

Mrs. Ghandi, who pops off about the U.S. every time a food shipment arrives, probably will find Saxbe's message upsetting. It's really a shame, if that should prove to be the case, for so long as she enjoys the give she should get a bang out of the take. Mrs. Ghandi and Saxbe could provide a dialogue which could break the monotony of most diplomatic exchanges.

Reasonable solution needed

Dear Editor: I was interested in reading the article on malpractice on the front page of the Progress Bulletin of May 24. In this you indicate that some doctors in the area are paying as much as $18,000 a year for malpractice insurance. I would like to clarify this point. During the early part of 1974, my quarterly premium amounted to $1,591.00. Several days ago I received a bill for one quarter, requesting that I send a check for $7,611.00. This somewhat exceeds the alleged publicized increase of 140 per cent and certainly exceeds the $18,000 which you mentioned. This premium amounts to $30,444.44 per annum. It should further be realized that if this system is allowed to continue, one can anticipate a 100 per cent increase minimum during 1976.

I am closing my office for one week. It should be realized that this financial burden cannot be borne by doctors of this area and, more specifically, by the high risk specialists such as orthopedists and neurosurgeons who do much of their work in the emergency room. This type of coverage will soon be unavailable in the Pomona area as it is for all practical purposes at the present time in the Covina area. The management of major emergency room injuries in which frequently one is dealing with a severely injured stranger is extremely difficult and arduous at best; we can no longer function under the constant harassment of unrestricted plaintiffs attorneys. A reasonable solution must be reached very quickly to avoid major devastating alterations in emergency room coverage in this area — Jack Boatman, M. D., Pomona.

Insurance rhubarb

Dear Editor: This rhubarb regarding malpractice insurance rates is both ridiculous and tragic because it points up two of our weaknesses in today's society. Selfishness and immaturity are basic to a good share of our dilemmas today and we are not going to remedy them by going to our legislatures. We are going to smooth out the road ahead only when we are mature enough to look at ourselves realistically and unselfishly enough to do something about it ourselves. You can't change human nature by laws.

While I sincerely feel that a good share of the malpractice problem would disappear if it were possible to put a ceiling on the "take" the attorneys get in these suits. Take a look at the growth of "no-fault" auto insurance and the opposition to it. It could tell us much. Real progress can and will come when each of us takes an honest look at ourselves and measures our ethics by the yardstick that He, (who said inasmuch as ye have done it unto the least of these my brethren, ye have done it unto me) gave us. Be we doctor, lawyer, merchant, teacher or what have you, while we may all feel that we are worthy of the value we seem to put on ourselves, let us not forget that the other fellow is human and endowed with the same hopes, aspirations and desires that we have. He has to live also — and provide for a family.

Dial-in for mayhem

WASHINGTON — Despite promises of reform, the TV networks still play up violence on children's show.

Researchers studying the Saturday morning fare clocked an act of aggression "every 3 and one-half minutes of actual program time on the commercial networks."

The worst offender was NBC, which produced 46 per cent of the violence. ABC had 30 per cent, CBS 24 per cent.

The mayhem subsided only long enough for the networks to sell the usual toys and tooth rot. The commercials sought to stimulate a desire in the kiddies for candy, pastries and pop.

"Children completely lacked exposure to . . . the most natural and wholesome foods," the researchers declare in a confidential study. "There were no advertisements for fruits, vegetables or dairy products."

For years, we have crusaded against TV violence, which many sociologists believe has helped spread lawlessness in America. Again and again, we have shown how youngsters imitate the TV feats of Evel Knievel or Bonnie and Clyde.

More than a year ago, we cited a Federal Communications Commission report which urged reform of children's TV. The new chairman, Richard Wiley, assured us that reform was "on the front burner."

Wiley's promises, according to the confidential survey, haven't done much to curb TV violence.

The study was conducted by the Media Action Research Center, with church and foundation backing. The Center found from a careful review of the TV offerings on two successive Saturday mornings that fistfights, robberies and other hostile acts were endemic on commercial television.

The shows with the most aggression, averaging a hostile act every minute on one Saturday, were "Bugs Bunny," "Pink Panther," "Speedy Buggy," and "Wheelie and the Chopper Bunch."

At the same time, the survey found "positive social behavior" on children's television. But the incidents of "sharing, helping and cooperation," although frequent enough, seldom offset the aggressive acts.

On the positive side, the report cites the TV show, "Devlin," as an "outstanding program." Throughout half the show, the researchers recorded "no agression, 10.33 acts of altruism, and 9.67 acts of sympathy explaining feelings."

Concludes the study: "It is possible to produce appealing nonviolent shows for children, given the desire and consientiousness to do so."

Footnote: the National Association of Broadcasters, which is holding a children's program conference in Washington this week, defended the networks. A spokesman said the networks, particularly ABC, have made "great strides in calming down the Saturday (programs)." He also contended that children are able to distinguish between cartoons and real life. Children understand that cartoons figures are fantasies, he said.

AZORES ALTERNATIVE: If Portugal blocks the United States from using the Azores as a staging base to supply Israel, Secretary of State Henry Kissinger has revealed, the United States is ready with "alternative possibilities."

He didn't elaborate.

We can report, however, that the Air Force has spent the past six months training crews to refuel giant C-5 cargo planes in mid-air. The crews are now ready.

They have taken C-5s on dramatic test flights halfway around the world—fully loaded, non-stop, with mid-air refueling. Some of the flying behemoths were flown from the West Coast of Iran, others from the East Coast to the Philippines.

In case Israel should need emergency supplies, the C-5s would be sent right down the middle of the Mediterranean over international waters.

Must women get tough?

There is a civilized response to the uncivilized crime of rape — but that response is NOT to drag the victim through a second traumatic ordeal in the courtroom.

Women, determined to defend themselves against the rapist, are taking matters into their own hands including taking up the martial arts, which is a fancy way of saying they are toughening themselves up to defend themselves.

At 155 Chambers St., in New York City, there is a school which teaches classes in "street technique," a fancy designation for "fighting dirty."

The women students exercise, pummel a punching bag, practice fighting with one another, sometimes using rubber knives. In conjunction with each of these activities they learn to yell — loud.

Miss Susan Murdock runs this school and others like it at Brooklyn College and Sarah Lawrence College. She is a pert young lady with light brown hair and dimples when she smiles, a real first-class "rape bait."

But in an instant this dainty Miss can clench her fists, bulge her biceps; the veins in her neck protrude, her face is contorted into a vicious grimace out of which comes a horrendous shriek!

She's "instant hideous," at least enough so to make any aggressive male think again. Miss Murdock says it is "fear which turns women into victims," that women "are just going to have to learn to fight."

Miss Murdock's schools are proving that women are really very much stronger than they think they are; that they are in better physical shape than three-fourths of the men they might meet, and they need only to learn to tap the violence within themselves.

There is a proliferation of classes in judo and karate in most every city where women are exploring another facet of Women's Liberation — one which requires that they become selfreliant. Miss Murdock's course begins with developing in her girls "a fighter mentality."

It starts with talk about men — bitter talk. It includes reviews of the news stories in which women, helpless, are brutalized.

"You learn to assert yourself," says Miss Murdock, "and violence becomes a friend. You learn to fight and people don't mess with you."

Her students range in age from 19 to 36, statistically the age group which is most vulnerable to rape. Some have been the victims of attack.

Lt. Mary Keefe of New York City's Police Department Sex Crimes Analysis Unit does not advocate hand-to-hand combat with an attacker. She recommends a knee in the groin, scream and run & or ram a ballpoint pen in his ear.

But Susan Murdock says, "Learn to fight and learn to yell!" Well. Since most sex crimes are commited by repeaters, it is obvious what should be done first: Get those guys off the street permanently. But until we are willing to get tough I guess our ladies will have to.

Just in jest

Well, I see the male chauvinist die-hards have managed to hold the fort on the weather front for at least another year. This in spite of loud complaints voiced by the Women Liberationists who have been alleging sex discrimination because, year after year, the National Weather Bureau has insisted on giving hurricanes women's names. But once again the nasty old weathermen remain adamant. The names for the big blows in 1975, they announce, will still all be feminine. The first one will be called "Amy."

The power of non-thinking

"My decision not to be a candidate for President is irrevocable and final." — Non-declaration of a non-candidate on a non-news day in a non-election autumn. 1974.

At the outset, let me say that this is a non-column.

For reasons having to do with my family and personal peace of mind, I have decided not to write a column today.

Moreover, it is my firm intention to resist all efforts to lure me into writing a column today — or at any time in the future.

This decision is irrevocable. It is final. I do not choose to write a column today, and that's that.

I will not do so if drafted.

I will not acknowledge the opinions contained therein should a column be printed under my name.

Is my position perfectly clear? Good. With that out of the way, let me give you a brief report on a non-conversation I recently had with Sam Null, head of the non-public relations firm of Non-Campaigns, Inc.

Null, in case you haven't heard, is the originator of that brilliant new method by which people running for public office can get around new campaign-financing laws. He calls it "Non-candidacy campaigning," and its effectiveness was proved once again last week, when Null's No. 1 non-candidate had his face plastered, for the umpteenth time, across the cover of a national non-news weekly.

I reached Null at his office after receiving a tip from an unidentified source who gave me his non-listed number.

"How," I asked, "is your non-campaign for President going?"

Null was nonplussed.

"I didn't know anything about a non-campaign," he snapped. "You'll have to ask my non-client about that."

"I tried," I shot back, "but it seems your client is on a non-campaign trip to Saudi Arabia."

"Nonsense," said Null. "The trip to Saudi Arabia is definitely not an official non-campaign trip. It's just a trip, period. Now, when he arrives in Israel that will be a non-campaign trip."

"What's the difference,?" I asked.

"It's too complicated to explain to a layman," he said. "This business of non-campaigning for the presidency is very complex. Most non-candidates can't handle it. Wallace was doing all right, but I understand his nerves couldn't take it and he's about to announce. Only Reagan and my man seem to have it down pat."

"Oh?" I said. "You see Reagan as a potential threat?"

"Look," Null replied peevishly, "I'm not going to sit here and indulge in non-sequiturs concerning other non-candidates. If you have a legitimate non-question, I'll give you a straight non-answer. Okay?"

"Okay," I replied. "Could you give me your non-candidate's non-campaign schedule, say for the next three months?"

"No problem," said Null. "He's just going to move around not doing all the campaign things he hasn't been doing ever since he announced his non-candidacy."

"For example?"

"Oh, you know. Nonpolitical Senate committee hearings attacking Ford on the Vietnam refugee problem, the energy crisis, inflation, recession, the collapse of the Boston Bruins —"

"Anything else?"

"Some non-candidate trips to California, Wisconsin, here-and-there, testing the non-campaign waters. But not too much really — it's in the bag. We're already preparing non-drafts on his convention acceptance speech. In fact, the only thing we worry about —"

"Yes?"

"Frankly, all that concerns us is that our non-candidate might get carried away one day and declare himself in the race."

"So?" I asked ingenuously. "What would be so bad about that?"

"You gotta be kidding!" Null said. "Then what would he be? Just another phony candidate whose word the public can't believe."

"Well," I said, "thanks for nothing."

"Don't mention it," said Sam Null. "I'd only deny it if you did. See you on the cover of Time."

And with that, the country's foremost non-campaign manager hung up. Remember the non-column where you read it first. Or more appropriately, forget it.

Anon.

Heartline

Heartline is a service for senior citizens. Its purpose is to answer questions. It costs you nothing. Write to Heartline, 8514 North Main St., Dayton, Ohio, 45415.

Heartline: I would like to know what states definitely recognize common-law marriages. I live in Delaware and I know they do not recognize them here. R. E.

Answer: Alabama, Colorado, Idaho, Iowa, Kansas, Montana, Ohio and Oklahoma. It is always best to check with your local social security office to make sure that there have been no changes made.

Heartline: I retired several years ago. My wife is old enough to receive a wife's annunity, but hasn't stopped working. Is she better off to wait until after 1975 to retire? I worked for the railroad. S. O.

Answer: In terms of changes in the new law, there are probably no new advantages or disadvantages for your wife when she files. If she was qualified for social security benefits in 1974, her equity in a social security benefit based on her earnings through December 31, 1974, will be retained, regardless of when she retires. But you should contact the nearest board office for more information.

Heartline: I just had a roof put on my home. I'm 74 years old. Now the roof is leaking and the contractor will not talk to me. Can you help? L. N.

Answer: Help is on the way. The contractor did not realize how serious the problem was and his next job will be fixing your roof.

Heartline: I am covered under the Federal Employee Health Benefits Program; can I also get Medicare? P. G.

Answer: Yes, if you are qualified for Medicare under Social Security.

Heartline: Is Workmen's Compensation taxable by the Federal Government? T. B.

Answer: Workmen's Compensation received because of sickness or injury is fully exempt from tax. However, if you turn over your Workmen's Compensation payments to your employer and he continues to pay you all or part of your regular salary, only the excess of the salary payments over the amount of workmen's compensation is considered received by you under a sick pay plan, and may be fully or partially excluded from income. Example: You are hurt on the job, and are out of work for six weeks. Your employer continues to pay your salary of $200 a week or $1,200 for the time you are absent. You receive $30 a week or a total of $180 workmen's compensation because of your injury and turn it all over to your employer under your employment contract. The $30 a week is fully excludable from your income and the balance of $170 a week is considered received under a sick pay plan.

Ann Landers

How do turkeys breed?

Dear Ann Landers: Your column is a great tool for educating people. I have learned from it and now I want to educate others. Although I never graduated from high school I am an authority on one subject. Turkeys.

I have raised turkeys for 33 years and discovered something that most people do not know. From very close observation I have learned that turkeys breed through the nose. The tom turkey has a small extension above his snoot which becomes visible when he struts.

Humans are unaware of this but the hen turkey knows. Turkeys strut when they want to mate. It's a lot like a tribal dance. If a hen turkey is interested in mating she will join the dance and rub her nostril against the tom's snoot. What occurs is the actual mating process.

Some of your so-called experts will say this is not true. I say let them look in books. I look at turkeys. — Topeka Reader

Dear Topeka: Since I'm unable to observe turkeys at close range (they aren't allowed in this apartment, Board of Health regulations) I must rely on books. According to everything I have read, turkeys mate just like all other birds.

Dear Ann Landers: This letter is intended to be a violent reprobation to Martin's Ferry, the man who said, "I happen to be a guy who wouldn't marry a girl who smokes — and there are many more like me."

The only printable reply to that statement I can think of is this: "I happen to be a girl who wouldn't marry a narrow-minded guy like Martin's Ferry and there are many more like ME."

Where is there a commandment written for women that says, "Thou Shalt Not Smoke"?

P. S. To Martin's wife: Honey, I feel sorry for you if you should ever decide to take up smoking. — Rockford Puffer

Dear Rock: Thanks for your point of view. Here's another one.

Dear Ann: I thought for sure my boyfriend wrote that letter and signed it "Martin's Ferry" although we live in another state. He swore on a Bible that he didn't — and I believe him.

When we first started to date I smoked like a chimney and it almost put an end to our relationship. He made it plain that he thoroughly detested smoking and I had to make an important decision. Was he worth giving up cigarets for? I decided he was and I quit.

That was six months ago and I'm thrilled I chose him over the cigarets. I feel so much better. My nasty cough is gone. It's as if I've been liberated from slavery. I want to shout from the housetops, "I love that man!" — Petunia

Dear Pet: Go ahead and shout. I'll bet it's music to his ears!

Dear Ann: Thanks for saying, "Not everyone belongs in college." Too many parents think it's a social disgrace if their children would prefer to go to work or, heaven forbid, attend a vocational school instead of follow Dad to Dartmouth or Mom to Smith.

About 80 per cent of the jobs today require no college degree. In fact the world needs more Ph.Ds like I need a hole in my head.

Please stress the dignity of work and the value of vocational education. — Over-Educated

Dear O. E.: "The dignity of work!" What a beautiful phrase! Thank you for a sane and solid letter. It's a pleasure to print it.

Are unicorns really corny?

One of the saddest drawings by New Yorker cartoonist Charles Addams showed two unicorns on a rocky shore watching Noah's ark sail off in the distance.

The poignant sketch was apocryphal, of course, because unicorns, like the rest of us, survived the Great Flood, and the strange beasts horned their way into Roman, Greek and Egyptian mythology and ended up on the royal arms of Great Britain.

The fabulous animal, usually depicted as having the body of a horse with a long, spirally twisted horn projecting from his forehead, can only be captured, according to Arthurian legend, when it lies down with its head in the lap of a virgin. There are not a lot of them in captivity.

Reason I got interested in the monoceros of ancient lore is that my wife recently applied for and received a Unicorn Hunting License issued by the Department of Natural Unicorns, with headquarters in Sault Ste. Marie, Mich. There are probably not a whole lot of unicorn hunting licenses in the Pomona Valley, possibly due to a shortage of virgins, but it's a good excuse for getting away from the dishes.

The DNU has set a set of strict strictures on unicorn hunting. The areas in which unicorns may be taken include the earth, the unexplored areas of the moon, and the Milky Way "except the southeastern rim which is closed to hunting in 1975 due to a hard winter." That cuts down considerably on the open range area.

Bag limit on vir—unicorns is one per month. "A success ratio higher than this often results in a form of mental rapture," warns the vir—organization.

Hunting hours for unicorns are daylight and dark except for St. Agnes' Eve. Acceptable hunting devices are Serious Intent, General Levity, Iambic Pentameter and Sweet Talk. Reports on unicorns captured, with horn measurements and addresses of nearby virgins, must be forwarded to the DNU in Sault St. Marie.

Unicorn hunters may wear what they like, but the uniforms must be colored Mordred Red or Gawaine Green. The license, which DNU likes to refer to as "privilege," must be pinned over the heart with a sprig of rosemary.

I don't know what we'd do with a unicorn if my wife captured one. As the mother of four, she's at a slight handicap in the hunt, but maybe our new permissiveness has infiltrated into the animal kingdom, too.

I just hope it's housebroken.

Small tank for saltwater fish

DEAR DR. MILLER: What's the smallest size that can be considered good for setting up a saltwater fish tank? — T.C.

DEAR. T.C.: A reasonable minimum marine aquarium size would be 20 gallons. Smaller tanks suffer from many ills, not the least of which is the temptation to add one more fish, resulting in overcrowding. As far as your floor is concerned, this doesn't always hold true. Consider sea water weighs 8.5 lbs. per gallon and consequently, a large tank would be heavy enough to go through floors not built to stand such stress. Marine aquariums in the 100-gallon class have been known to crash through the floor and litter the room below from end to end with plaster, gravel, glass water—and numerous dead fish.

DEAR DR. MILLER: Benny was driving us crazy with his barking. The neighbors complained about it bitterly, too. It wasn't his fault. It was the stupid cats that would sit outside of the fence and watch him. He couldn't stand them, so he'd bark his head off. but we found the answer and that's why I'm writing, so other readers can get the good news. It was so simple, I don't know why someone didn't think of it before. We had his vocal cords cut out, de-barking they call it. That was three months ago. Ah, bless. Peace and quiet. It's wonderful. Benny goes around barking, but only to himself and to the dumb cat that still sits on the fence. But we hardly hear him because all he makes is a tiny squeak now, and of course the neighbors don't hear him at all. It's wonderful. How come more dogs aren't de-barked, I wonder? — V. F.

DEAR V.F.: Ventriculocordectomy (that de-barking) may be the answer in some cases. In my opinion, it's worth a trial when all else, including training and exercise fails to solve the barking dog problem. Unfortunately, de-barking has problems of its own. Results are inconsistent and generally compartively short-lived. Cutting the vocal cords will invariably result in a change but it may not eliminate sound or even reduce it to a soft whisper. The bark may simply change pitch. Occasionally, the resulting shriek is worse than the initial bark. Unfortunately, too, even when silence is achieved with this surgery, the aphonia (silent barking) may be achieved only for a few months.

Dr. Lamb

Mystery pain in his side

DEAR DR. LAMB — My husband has had a pain on his left side in the rib cage area. He's had it about a year. It's a constant pain but gets worse at times and is very uncomfortable. He has been to two medical doctors and a gastrointestinal specialist to the tune of about $300 to have them all say there is nothing wrong.

I know you can't diagnose this through a newspaper, but what is your suggestion? What should his next step be? Ulcers seem to run in our minds. He is not a smoker, drinks occasionally and drinks very little coffee.

DEAR READER — First the good news. Regardless of how uncomfortable your husband is, it is very unlikely that he has any serious life-threatening disorder in light of the examinations he has already had.

With this information in hand, it is time to do some self experimentation. He should try a whole new routine of life style and see if he can't shake his problem. I'd suggest that he stop coffee in any amount in all forms, including any of the decaffeinated brands. Also, he should eliminate all soft drinks or colas. Tea and chocolate in all forms should be eliminated. All alcoholic beverages should be avoided.

At the beginning of this program also eliminate milk and all milk products. Feed him a diet that contains adequate amounts of vegetables and real whole wheat bread. Not all brown bread is made using only whole wheat flour. He should drink plenty of water. Eliminate all strong seasoning and spices, such as garlic and pepper. He can use salt.

If he doesn't already have a regular exercise program he should start one. This should be done gradually if he is starting from scratch.

Since he is not a smoker I won't need to recommend he avoid tobacco, otherwise I would.

He should also avoid cheese in all forms and all foods made with dairy products during his test period. If he is doing well on this program after four weeks, you can be fairly sure his problem is related to his digestive response to his current eating and living habits.

Then you can add fortified skim milk or low fat cottage cheese back to his diet to see if he tolerates these without difficulty. If he does then you can keep him on this program, and it will be possible for him to have a healthy, balanced diet that won't irritate his digestive system.

If he does tolerate milk products well, then he will be able to add a bowl of cereal to his diet daily. He should use one of the whole wheat or bran products. This will improve the amount of bulk in his diet and help his digestion.

Now, if the program doesn't work, then I suspect he may need further tests, but my guess is that this program in a man who has already had a good complete examination with no finding will likely do the trick for him. Let me know how he gets along with the program.

Lancelot attacks hand boldly

By Oswald & James Jacoby

Lancelot the peerless looked over dummy with distaste. Dinadan, the worst player at the square table, raised Lancelot every time he could. But the peerless one wished that Dinadan had just a wee bit more.

Then Lancelot went after the hand like he would go after a dragon or giant. He led a club toward dummy and went up with the king after West played low. The king held and the first dragon had been taken care of.

Next came the queen of spades finesse. Lancelot wanted to take it some time or other and this just might be his only chance.

The queen held and the second dragon had bit the dust. He led the jack of spades, covered with the ace, ruffed a spade in dummy and led a trump.

It was equally simple for Lancelot to go right up with his ace. He wanted to be able to ruff his last spade in dummy and a closing finesse might make that impossible.

The ace dropped the king, but that was frosting on the cake. It just gave Lancelot an overtrick.

SHOWGIRL LINDA BOGSRUD ON STRIP

. . . WITH BALLET PARTNER GARY SNIDER

By ROD ANGOVE
Associated Press Writer

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — Some casino dancers are moonlighting in classical ballet "because it does something for your heart."

The windfall of talent gives the Las Vegas area an amateur ballet company that is "certainly as good as many in the major American cities," says director Vassili Sulich.

With an $8,000 federal grant, the Nevada Dance Theatre of the University of Nevada at Las Vegas opened a series of four performances Saturday.

All performances are in early afternoon because the casino dancers, five men and five women, work nights in the Casino de Paris show at the Dunes and the Folies Bergere at the Tropicana.

In the casino shows, they wear skimpy costumes and lavish finery. The pay is good— Gary Snider, 24, of San Francisco, says it's $2,000 to $3,000 a year more than he made with the Harkness Ballet Co., which closed last year.

At the theater, they wear the simplest costumes and work for free.

"It's a little schizophrenic," said Snider's classical ballet partner, Linda Bogsrud, 22, of Chesapeake, Va. "We do be-bop two shows a night. Then the next afternoon we work out on the bar and get involved in the classical."

"Jazz dancing at the Dunes is enjoyable. Physically it's taxing—four hours of hard work a night. But it's not real work. If that's all I had to do, I'd go crazy. Two shows a night, always the same, is the end of the line. If that's all I had to do, I'd go crazy. I'd go insane," said Miss Bogsrud.

"In ballet, you're totally immersed. It's emotional. You have to put across to the audience the enjoyment you get from doing it. There's always something to improve," she added.

Snider, a 6-footer who lifts his 125-pound partner over his head with apparent ease, said jazz dancing "isn't hard enough. We've got too much ambition and the skill to back it up."

They're negotiating to insert their classical talents into the next Casino de Paris show.

"Then maybe the Lido in Paris," said Miss Bogsrud. "Dancing in Europe doesn't earn much money but it's good for the soul. They're hungry for good American dancers over there."

Yugoslavia-born Sulich calls his casino dancers "very talented, very dedicated."

"It's difficult finding work in classical ballet these days," he added.

Of the 10, one is Italian, one Belgian, and one Mexican. The other 18 members of the theater are students of Sulich.

Sulich, who came to Las Vegas with the Folies Bergere in 1964, said there is talk about the group becoming a professional state repertory company.

"But that takes financing," he said. "I know less about that than choreography."

Declaring war on U.S. . . .

Better than 'Let's Make A Deal'

BONNERS FERRY, Idaho (AP) — War has not been hell for the Kootenai Indians.

Most Kootenais agree that declaring war on the United States has been the only good thing to happen to their 67-member band since 1855, when their ancestral land was signed away without their presence at the treaty of Hellgate, Mont.

The tiny tribe has found its only adversaries to be government agencies fighting back with money instead of bullets.

Projects begun as a result of the bloodless war declared last Sept. 20 include a road to a new 17.5-acre reservation, a tribal housing program, a water and sewage system and a comprehensive planning program.

The spending spree totals about $475,000, or about $7,090 per Kootenai.

Money and assistance poured from the government because the Kootenais, concerned that their band might cease to exist, seized on a "war" as the best vehicle for seeking aid. There was no violence in the war, just spectacular publicity.

"These programs are a direct result of their revolution," said Rodger Bernklow, a Bureau of Indian Affairs spokesman for the Northern Idaho Agency.

Agencies like the Indian Health Service have continued their usual programs, including medical and dental care for tribal members. The Economic Development Administration is optimistic that a $100,000 federal grant will be approved to construct a community center for the approximately 30 Kootenais who live near or on the reservation.

The tribe-without-a-treaty went on a warpath paved with dimes eight months ago. Toll points were established on both sides of this logging community of 2,800 and motorists were asked to pay a dime for crossing the Kootenais' claimed ancestral land.

Gov. Cecil Andrus ordered about 70 troopers — more than a third of the Idaho State Police force — to converge on the town. There were no arrests. Four days and about 15,000 dimes later, most of the troopers had left.

"The state police came with Mace and sawed-off shotguns," said the Kootenai's leader, tribal chairwoman Amy Trice. "The closest thing we had to a weapon in our tribal office was a flyswatter."

But state police said at the time their presence was necessary to protect the Indians from rowdy outsiders.

Both sides in the September skirmish remember when the Indians considered erecting roadblocks and asking the militant American Indian Movement to send "volunteers" if troopera arrested Kootenais. The AIM telephone number is still on the wall of the tribal office.

The office is almost as busy these days as at the height of the confrontation with state police; government officials come in increasing numbers to offer fiscal peace pipes.

"Now we're getting some place," said Mrs. Trice, immersed in a stack of government-generated correspondence that she calls "white tape."

"Before we had to ask, 'Please Mr. BIA Man' to get anything," Mrs. Trice said. "Now they are calling us.

"We're still at war. We'll remain at war until our demands are met."

The demands remain the same as when the tribe adopted its declaration of war: a larger reservation of 128,000 acres carved from National Forest land; additional payment of about $1 an acre for 1.6 million acres of claimed aboriginal land in Northern Idaho and Western Montana for which the government paid 36 cents an acre in 1962, as well as hunting and fishing privileges and water and mineral rights.

Some Kootenais still

MAYTAG

MAYTAG MEANS DEPENDABILITY

It takes a lot of years and a lot of dependability to gain the reputation Maytag enjoys throughout the United States in laundry equipment. It's no fluke, either! Maytag has watched many competitors come and go during the 70 years in the laundry business, and has constantly improved their product to make it more durable and reliable. And Maytag's not through, either. They are now in a position of leadership in the field and are striving to open the way to new horizons on progress in YOUR home. That's real progress.

M & M STANDS FOR DEPENDABILITY,

We've been around for a while, too! Our affiliation with Maytag goes back to 1931, before the Pomona Mall, before Pomona became a fair-sized city, before the San Bernardino Freeway, before . . . but NOT before we decided to try to match Maytag's standards of performance at M & M Electric. We've watched competitors come and go, too, and realize that the key to success in our business is SERVICE. Maytag's got it, and we're doing our best to provide dependable service. Like the song says, we've come a long way; but we're not satisfied until YOU'RE SATISfied . . . with our products, our attitude and our service.

Music club names officers

Frank Cummings, organist and choir director of Pilgrim Congregational Church, Pomona, has been named president of the Musicians Club of Pomona Valley, a post he also held from 1944 to 1946.

Cummings earned his bachelor of arts and bachelor of music degrees from the University of Redlands and his master's degree from Columbia University. He also studied at the Julliard School of Music in New York, at Pomona and Occidental colleges, and at UCLA. In 1939 he became director of choral music at Pomona Junior College (now Mt. San Antonio College) and later at Pomona and Ganesha high schools. He served the school district for 29 years, and is in his 40th year at Pilgrim Congregational Church. He was a founder and president of the Choral Conductors Guild of California, Pomona Valley Community Concert Association and the Musicians Club.

Others taking office with Cummings were Mrs. Melvin Pinner, first vice president; Mrs. C. R. McCullough, second vice president; Mrs. Kent Green, recording secretary; Mrs. Harry Jenkins, corresponding secretary; Mrs. Alice H. Vincent, treasurer; Mrs. Robert L. Keeler, parliamentarian, and Marshall Miller, historrian.

The installing officer at the recent meeting was the Rev. Benton Gaskell, minister of the Pilgrim Congregational Church. The event was held at the La Verne Church of the Brethren.

HARDHAT HARMONY — The London Symphony Orchestra wore hardhats during a recent recording session in London's Holy Trinity Church which is being rebuilt. The orchestra is one of the leading symphonies but concert hall space in the British capital is so much in demand that the old church was the best site that could be found. Conductor Andre Previn has started a fund drive to convert an abandoned church into a rehearsal hall for the symphony orchestra.

SPEBSQSA sets tryouts

The Pomona Valley Chapter of the Society for the Preservation and Encouragement of Barber Shop Quartet Singing in America will hold auditions for new members on the mall of the Montclair Plaza at 7:30 p.m. Thursday and Friday.

Chorus members, under conductor Carl Walters, will present an informal program, admission free.

SPEBSQSA, a national organization of men interested in the old songs of the gaslight era, was formed in Tulsa, Okla., in 1938. It has more than 35,000 members in 750 chapters in every state and several Canadian provinces. It is the largest singing fraternity in the world.

The society's principal charity is the Institute of Logopedics in Wichita, Kan., an organization for children and adults with speech problems. The motto of SPEBSQSA is "We sing . . . that they shall speak."

Musical training or the ability to sight read music is not required for membership. Males of all ages who can maintain pitch and follow a melody are eligible.

An exhibition of work by professional photographer Bob Baumann of Upland and photography students at Mt. San Antonio, Citrus and Chaffey colleges is on view this week on the mall of the Montclair Plaza.

Baumann recently had an exhibit at the Pomona Valley Art Association gallery in Pomona.

Chaffey shows Indian pottery

"Portrait of the Earth," an exhibition of ancient and contemporary Indian pottery, opened Sunday at the Wignall Museum-Gallery at Chaffey College. It continues to July 3.

The collection was gathered from the San Bernardino County Museum, the Southwest Museum and private collectors throughout Southern California. Some of the pieces appeared in the "Seven Families in Pueblo Pottery" show at the University of New Mexico last year.

The works are displayed against appropriate mural photographs from original prints by Edward Curtis. On view are Zuni water jugs, plates and bowl, sculptured figures from Cochiti and a black melon bowl from Santa Clara.

In conjunction with the exhibit, demonstrations of the making and firing of coiled pottery will be offered in the patio by student Kim Koga Sunday and Monday afternoons and Wednesdays at 7 p.m.

John Collins of Cal State Fullerton, collector and author of "Nampeyo Hopi Potter," will give an illustrated lecture on contemporary pueblo pottery in the Forum Building at 3 p.m. Sunday.

MSAC plans luau

Mt. San Antonio College will hold a day-long Hawaiian luau, with native dances and a giant barbecue, in Memorial Stadium June 21.

Preparations for the luau will begin at 7 a.m. when a huge pit will be dug for the pig roast in the stadium. A group of Polynesians will give a step-by-step description of the history and tradition of the pig pit and of the many dances associated with the tropical islands. Outrigger canoes will be displayed and several films will be presented during the afternoon, including "Fire Mountain" and "The RA Expedition."

At 5:30 the luau dinner of roast pig, chicken, chop suey, fruit salad and Polynesian punch will be served. More than 50 dancers and musicians representing many of the Polynesian islands will perform in costume during the luau.

The event is open to the public, but advance reservations are necessary for the luau dinner. Tickets are $4.50 for adults and children over 12; $2.50 for children 12 and under.

The luau is part of the preparations for three camping and hiking trips to the Hawaiian Islands planned for July and August as part of the college's adult education program. Each eight-day session will enroll 20 students. The journeys will concentrate on Kauai Island.

Campers will visit Hanalei Bay, the site of the filming of the movie "South Pacific," Fern Grotto on the Wailua River, the only river in the Hawaiian Island chain where a boat can be launched, Menehune Gardens, and the site of Captain Cook's first landing and sugar cane and pineapple fields.

Instructors for the three trips are Don Greeley and Ray Adermann, MSAC physical education instructors. Reservations for the July 28, Aug. 11 and Aug. 18 trips are $395 for adults and $275 for children. The reservation cost includes air fare, meals, guides and instruction, island reservations and all tours. The students are expected to furnish their own camping, hiking and skin diving equipment.

Reservations for the luau may be made with Don Greeley at 598-2811 or 595-4773.

Further information can be obtained at the MSAC Adult Education Office, 598-2811, Ext. 321.

Likes older men

DEAR DR. BROTHERS: I'm a 17-year old girl in my last year of high school. Because of my mother, I'm going to finish the term but I really hate school and want to get married. Ever since I started being attracted to boys I've found myself falling for older men, and now I'm in love with a man in his 30s. Actually, this guy was a friend of my mother. My father has been dead for almost nine years.—V.R.

Dear V.R.: It is important that you understand some of the reasons why you are consistently attracted to older men. The fact that you are aware of this pattern is in itself a positive step.

Of course, it is not impossible for a young girl and a much older man to be truly in love and find happiness, but statistics indicate that the chances for a happy marriage are higher when a man and woman are closer in age. It seems to me that if you can analyze what really attracts you to older men you will be in a better position to determine for yourself the true basis for your relationship, and if it is, indeed, love.

We hear a great deal about the importance of boys having fathers, but girls learn much from their fathers, too. Fathers are the first males in their lives and it is through them that most women experience the first emotions and feelings of the relationship between the sexes.

To his children, father is usually an impressive and powerful figure, the authority and breadwinner and because he is not around as much as their mother children usually are less aware of his petty faults and weaknesses. It is sometimes easier to idealize the missing parent than the one who is around constantly to remind one just how human he or she is. Even though the memory of your father may be dim, this attraction and love, surely, was there when you were a child.

Frequently, when women are attracted to older men they are searching for a father-figure. This is especially apt to be the case when the girl loses her father while she is very young, either through divorce or death. All through our adult life we try to repeat pleasant experiences we had when younger even though we have consciously forgotten them.

If she has felt any struggle for material things, a young girl may feel more secure with an older man because he can easily provide possessions she may have always wanted. Many children, as well as adults, find security through money. In its basic sense, money means food and food means love to the infant, and frequently to the adult.

Young girls can often feel a complete dependency on older men almost to the extent that they can return to a state of infancy where they are taken care of completely, without having to share the responsibility necessary with a man nearer their own age.

However, money is not enough of a reason to spend any part of your life in an unhappy union. A girl sometimes rushes into marriage simply to rebel against her mother's home rule or to prove that she has grown up. This, too, is a wrong reason for marriage.

Since you are only 17 it would be advisable to date men nearer your age before marriage. Your letter sounds as if you simply wanted to "get married," generally, as if marriage is more important to you, at this point, than the individual you choose to marry. Take time to think over why you feel so driven toward marriage, and why you are attracted to older men. If you can learn more about yourself and your desires now, it may save you a great deal of pain later.

Marriages down

June brides, take care. You soon may be an endangered specie. Says the June Family Circle, "More people in the U.S. are living alone than ever before." Moreover, based on statistics from the National Center for Health, the magazine affirms that the marriage rate is down for the first time in 16 years, while the divorce rate continues climbing. With statistics like these, Family Circle might do well to rename itself the Single Square!

Did you ever see a picture that was painted directly on a wall? A fresco is a type of mural painting made by brushing water colors into the fresh, wet plaster of a wall or a ceiling.

"Fresco" (pronounced FRES koh) is an Italian word that means "fresh."

To make a fresco, the artist first makes a sketch the exact size of the finished picture. Then he lays as much fresh plaster as can be painted in one day.

Next, he traces the sketch on the fresh plaster. He is then ready to paint. The fresco artist must work quickly, because he cannot paint over the plaster once it is dry.

The paint pigments penetrate the fresh plaster and, when dry, become a permanent part of the wall.

Some of the greatest fresco painters lived during the Middle Ages.

You can see many frescoes that were painted by famour Italian artists on the plaster walls and ceilings of buildings in Vatican City, Rome.

Here's wonderful news! A pocket radio, camera, World Almanac globe or other fine prize will be awarded to the first youngster sending in a question used here. Send your question and your age to Johnny Wonder, (c/o this newspaper), Box 1335 (DA), Santa Cruz, CA 95061.

Kootenai

don't support the war.

"I don't want to comment about what has happened," said Ray Abraham, still a non-supporter of the uprising. He was working for the Boundary County sheriff's office last September.

But his brother, Ronnie Abraham, another young Kootenai, was collecting tolls at the time. "Now some people in town respect me more because we showed them we were determined to do what we said we were going to do," Ronnie said.

The bill to establish a 12.5 acre reservation had been introduced in Congress years before the Indians declared war. It was adopted about a month after the war began. An adjacent 5 acres were donated by the Roman Catholic Church, which retained a half acre plot for an Indian mission, built in the 1920s.

The tiny reservation, still called "The Mission" locally, is a wooded knoll rising like an island surrounded by plowed wheat fields.

There are four decrepit houses. One is being remodeled under yet another federal program. Another is the home of the aging chief of the Kootenais, Moses Joseph. A heap of painted rocks contain the faded names of the great chiefs of the Kootenai.

Most of the approximately 30 Kootenais in the valley live in town or on the remaining 1,400 acres of allotments given to individual Kootenais by the government.

Reaction to the war has been mixed in town. Some white residents publicly praise the Kootenais for humbling the federal government while privately calling them disorganized drunks. But everyone agrees it's been quiet in Bonners Ferry since the state police pulled out last September.
